NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH
 When Sandow poses and the muscles ridge his back and knot his arms, we think we have before us the very secret of strength in those magnificent muscles. But we haven't. Starve Sandow, or what is practically the same thing, let him be dyspeptic, and his muscle would soon fail. Strength is made from food properly digested and assimilated, and no man is stronger than his stomach, because when the stomach is diseased digestion and assimilation are imperfect.
 Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food so that the body is nourished into perfect health and strength.
 "I had what my physician called indigestion. He gave me medicine for the trouble but it did me no good," writes Mr. W. H. Wells, of Willard, N. C. "I wrote to Dr. Pierce and stated my case. He sent me a descriptive list and hygienic rules. I carried out these as best I could, bought six bottles of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and commenced taking it. A few days later I noticed a great change. Felt like a new man. Before I began the use of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I suffered greatly with pain in stomach, my nerves seemed all 'run-down,' I was very thin in flesh, but now can eat heartily and sleep good at night."
 Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send twenty-one one-cent stamps for the paper-covered book, or thirty-one stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE STORAGE OF FURS AND WOOLENS.

In this climate it is never safe to pack away winter clothing much before May. April's sun is warm and beguiling, but sleet and piercing winds are likely to follow the finest day. It is at this season, however, that the housekeeper must be on the lookout for moths.

Before the last of April the tweeds, to locate them scientifically, are all house-hunting, for May is the month in which they deposit their eggs.

The most expensive tailor-made gown, the richest furs, the baby's soft flannel blankets and embroidered petticoats, the dress coat, the velvet hat with its sweeping plumes, are none too good for their housing, which must also provide abundant and toothsome material for the larvae to whet their mandibles on.

With the depositing of the tiny eggs Mme. Moth's mission in life is accomplished; but the larvae, who make their appearance in June, enter at once upon the programme mapped out for them from the beginning—transforming the materials of their dwelling into soft jackets for themselves. With such vigor do these dull white caterpillars carry on their appointed tasks that within a week the most expensive garment may be ruined.

CLEAN GARMENTS BEFORE STORING THEM.

Cedar closets, malodorous moth balls, tar paper, camphor, tobacco, whatnot, are all powerless to stay the course of nature if the garments are put away with the eggs already deposited. On this account the greatest care must be taken to see that all garments to be stored are absolutely clean and free from moths or eggs when put away. Furs must be well aired, not sunned—for the ardent beams of a hot spring sun are more disastrous to a fine seal garment than a whole winter's wear—then thoroughly beaten with a slender switch or cane will reach the skin itself. A regular fur comb can be used to advantage. If soiled about the neck, cleanse with fine white soap that can be obtained at the bird stores. Heat this in the oven until it is as hot as the hand can be borne in it, scatter it through the fur, beat lightly with a switch and finish by brushing both up and down with a little whisk broom. This will give luster to the fur.

If there are pockets turn them inside out, brush, then turn smoothly back again. The cleaning thoroughly accomplished, the garment is ready to pack or hang away. If room is abundant a special (dark) closet may be given up to the keeping of furs. In this case paper it all over, top and bottom, with tar paper, covering this with a second coat of newspaper to prevent sticking. Here the garments may hang without crushing or wrinkling, and from here they can readily be taken out once a month and examined. Failing a closet, a clean, tight barrel or a chest whose interior has been carefully pasted over with tar paper and newspaper will answer very well. If reduced to the extremity of a pasteboard box, fold smoothly and pack in square newspaper bags, for the moth has a rooted aversion to printer's ink.

Lay the article to be packed on one clean sheet of newspaper, cover with another sheet and seal all four sides, leaving no opening as large as a pin-head. Before sealing put in a few pieces of gum camphor or any of the numerous moth preventives, care being taken to wrap them in tissue paper or sew them in bags to prevent direct contact with the fur and consequent discoloration. Write the name of the garment on the outside of the package, lay in the box cover and wrap in newspaper with an outside layer of tar paper.

Bags of new, cheap, unbleached cotton, made a little longer than the article protected, are advised for large garments that are to be hung away. Have the bags stitched closely, turned and stitched again, and left long enough at the top to be turned and tied down.

All woolen garments must be thoroughly brushed, aired and cleaned before packing away, for spots of any sort are seized upon by moths as specially delectable.

An excellent cleansing fluid that should always be kept on hand for sponging spots comes in well at this time and may be made in quantity to last through the year.

Shave fine one-quarter pound of white castile soap, pour one quart of soft water over it and let it soak over night. In the morning set on the back of the stove, where it will dissolve, but not boil. Then take four or five quarts of soft rain water, or distilled water, put in the soap and stir through it, then add one ounce liquid ammonia, one-quarter ounce spirits of wine and one ounce of ether. Shake and bottle. Shake each time before using.

Spread the garment to be sponged on the ironing board, protecting the cover by a thick newspaper; make a little rubber of stokinette or any soft cloth-dip in the fluid and rub the soiled spot. This will be found almost invaluable for cleaning the spots from men's heavy clothing. Woolen dresses that are to be made over in the autumn should be ripped up, brushed and sponged or washed in soap bark. If the latter, boil five cents' worth of soap bark in a quart of water, strain through a cloth and add sufficient hot water to cover the goods. Pour another quart of water over the bark, and give it a second boiling for the rinsing water. Wash the goods, sousing it up and down and sopping the hands. Rinse in the water from the second boiling of bark, shake and hang up to partially dry. Have the irons heating, and press the goods on wrong side while still damp.

Be sure the barrel, chest or dry goods box into which garments are to be packed is thoroughly clean, dry and moth proof. Have memorandum book at hand, into which may be entered the list of things in order packed. Lay the heavy winter overcoats and flannels at the bottom and follow by the lighter articles. When the box or chest is full, sprinkle camphor or moth balls through it, between the packages, cover the top with several layers of newspaper, then put on the cover or paste a double thickness of newspaper over the top, taking care that no single aperture is left for the entrance of the enemy. If free from moth eggs when put away the contents of the packages will come out fresh and sound in the autumn. Garments hung up in a closet should be inspected once or twice during the summer.

EVIDENTLY A GOOD ROMANCER.
 Entertaining Piece of Fiction Concerning a Polite Man.

"These rattling, clanging street cars seem to furnish a poor environment for romantic situations," said an elderly gentleman on a Third street car a few days ago, according to the Milwaukee Sentinel, "but I witnessed an incident while in a car in Cleveland, where I resided a few months ago, that impressed me of Cupid's indifference to proper stage settings. The woman in this case was a charming and wealthy widow, who had been the wife of the most profane man I ever knew. The fellow finally choked to death on a complicated oath that would have strangled a canal driver. His abuse of language was almost intolerable to his wife, so that after his death, when she had commenced to look for another companion, she resolved to become wedded to no man who ever used an oath. In order to determine whether her suitors were prone to curse, she caused them annoyance in various ways, and in no instance did she find a man whom she was not obliged to reject because of his fault. She tried lawyers, doctors, ministers and even a deaf mute. The latter could make no sound, but he forced the words with his lips so perceptibly that the woman could not fail to distinguish them. In fact, she said that, excepting her husband, this silent man was the peer in the use of strong speech.

"The car was crowded on the day of the event I am to relate. The woman was obliged to cling to a strap, where she swayed back and forth in front of a meek little man who sat with his knees squarely together, and upon them held a pasteboard box of eggs. A passenger elbowed his way down the aisle, as the car approached a corner, and caused the woman to release her hold upon the strap. At that moment the car-wheel struck a switch and the passengers who were standing were thrown in every direction. The woman, with grace unbecoming a young and pretty widow, sat down squarely in the man's lap and upon the box of eggs. She shrieked and jumped up, turning toward the man and offered a profuse apology. He arose, with the broken eggs and running down his coat, and raised his hat.

"It was merely a slight accident, madam," he said, "No apology is necessary."

"No, sir. He had not said another word, nor did he appear as if he desired to emphasize his feelings in words. The woman recovered from her confusion, and, regardless of the passengers, followed the man from the car and into the corner grocery store, where, I presume, he disposed of the eggs. Three weeks later they were married.

"Humph! Well, well," ruminated a fellow-passenger. "Who was the fellow, anyway?"
 "I learned later," concluded the old gentleman, "that he was employed in a large dry goods store at a dress goods counter, where he was ever within hearing and sight of the proprietor, who was a stickler for politeness among his clerks. He now has an automobile and a downtown office as a reward for his perseverance in faithful service with the yardstick. Well, here's my street. So long."

An Eagle's Strength.

What tremendous power an eagle exerts when carrying away a lamb that weighs, say, sixty pounds or over! If you take the weight of the bird together, seventy-six pounds, then it appears that an eagle can develop more than two horsepower and must put a strain of over 1,100 pounds on the muscles of the wings, which leads one to think that "birds are stronger than mathematics."
