KEIFFER PEARS ARE A FAILURE.
Farmers Will Not Make Much Profit This Season.

The Kieffer pear crop, which has usually pulled the Delaware farmers through with a big profit where the peach crop failed entirely as it did this year, is now about to fail. Sometime in June the leaves on some of the older Kieffer orchards began to show signs of disease then fell until all the lower branches were bare. A new growth of leaves appeared then some trees burst into bloom. These blossoms were then killed by the blight of the leaves, or were attacked by the frosted brats and the trifling amount of fruit that had matured on the trees is small and defective. Where the farmers resorted to spraying, however, the trees are full of well developed fruit and the foliage is restored. This has set all the farmers to talking in favor of spraying and to rigging machines to do this work. A well-versed speaker and writer who grows large crops said Saturday: "The Delaware fruit grower who will not spray after this experience should apply to the Orphan's Court for a guardian over himself." Not only apples and pears, but peaches also should be sprayed. The same is emphatically true of quinces.—Smyrna Call.
About the same condition exists in Kent county as is described in the above article from Delaware.

I. O. O. F. CONVENTION.

The city of Baltimore has been the scene this week of one of the largest and most representative conventions in its history. It has been the mecca towards which have flocked the various State Orders in the union to enjoy the hospitality for which the great monumental city is noted, and to discuss the great and important questions that were under consideration, Baltimore City has the honor of being the birth place of this magnificent order, and she killed the fatted calf and put on her best raiment, not to receive a prodigal but to welcome an offspring that has made the world so much better by its existence. Governor John Walter Smith delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the State at the opening session in Ford's Grand Opera House on Monday morning, and Mayor McLaughlin performed the same function on behalf of the city. Grand Master Rossman welcomed the various orders, saying, "The hand of every Maryland Odd Fellow is extended, the heart of every Maryland Odd Fellow pulses with true affection as its beats are quickened with delight at your presence." The parade on Wednesday was one of the finest and most elaborate seen in Baltimore in years, eight thousand men being in line. The municipal illumination and electrical display outclassed anything of the kind ever seen in Baltimore. The great arch at Baltimore and St. Paul Sts. flashed out a brilliant welcome to the I. O. O. F. and showed the three links of the Order in the same brilliant markings. The Court of Honor on Calvert street, the arch at Gay street and the one at Eutaw street, the Crown of the Shot-tower, the myriads of loops across Baltimore street, the flaming mantle in front of the City Hall and the great City Hall dome all presented a most magnificent picture of light and beauty. Of the fraternal displays both the Odd Fellows' Temple and the headquarters of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, on Liberty, near Fayette, the Masonic Temple, on Charles street, Pythian Castle, Gay and Lexington streets, Mechanics Hall, Paca street and Ellis Hall, on West Fayette street, presented beautiful and brilliant decorations of light and color. James W. Chapman, Jr., Esq., Grand Warden of the Maryland Lodge, was a conspicuous figure in the celebration proceedings. Mr. Chapman, as editor of their official organ, The Odd Fellow, has done much to bring the orders of the State to a high degree of excellency and is to be complimented for having won, through his energy and zeal, a place of such prominence and trust in the order. The Convention was the occasion of many social functions of a very pleasant character. Baltimore's hospitable women striving to furnish each visitor his complement of good cheer. Quite a number of Kent county people attended the Convention.
