HOMESTEAD AS IT IS.

Homestead derives its name from what, it is hard to tell. It is a milling town with four brick buildings and a population of 9,000. The male sex compose two-thirds of this, and they were employed until within a short time ago in Carnegie's mills. They are a rough-looking set of men, as docile as children in times of peace, but brave in times of war, as was attested by their courage in Wednesday's troubles. Their work is the hardest labor that man accomplishes, for which they ask only an adequate return. In many instances, the money they work for is spent before 'tis earned. The entire town is owned by Carnegie, and the money he pays these men, most of it flows back again into his overflowing coffers. They live from hand to mouth and hardly a cent is laid by for a rainy day. They prefer to let the future take care of itself.

The wives of these men are plain-looking, industrious women, who do not even have the necessities, much less the pleasures of their more fortunate sisters who live in and around the cities. They are contented though, and would have been only too willing to have taken a stand side by side with their male companions in the long-to-be-remembered struggle.

One thousand of the population of Homestead are what are called Huns. Some are employed at skilled labor, but the majority do the common sort of work around the mills. They, with but few exceptions, speak no English and are controlled by a leader, Frank Moroni. He is a big, strapping fellow with a not too pleasing countenance, but his word is law with the "Huns." He settles all differences for them amongst themselves and others and in this way Frank lives occasionally doing a day's work.

The houses are for the most part two-story frame affairs, with no conveniences, and built in the cheapest possible manner. Some front on alleys and some on what are called principal streets, these being the ones through which the railroad tracks are laid. Board walks are laid in some parts of the borough, but only in places, and the railroad tracks are used extensively for promenades. The hill that forms a back-ground for the borough is also owned by Carnegie, and was black with women and children Wednesday, watching the struggle between their husbands, fathers and brothers against the detectives—"paid murderers"—as the Pinkerton men are called. Thursday the scene had changed, and a force of men were busy grading the hill on which the millionaire will erect $8-a-month-shanties.

Carnegie's mills are located in Mifflin township, just outside of the borough of Homestead, and extend for three-quarters of a mile along the river front. Inside the big board fence can be seen the tall smoke stacks looming high above the many brick buildings which cover the vast furnances for melting iron and converting it into steel. Here is where the armor for our navy—huge plates of steel—is turned out by the men who are now locked out.

A detailed description cannot at this time be given, as the works, are under guards of the locked-out men, who are protecting their former employers' property.

At the extreme upper end of these works was were the men on the tug and barges attempted to land, and were repulsed by the strikers who gained, it is said, the first victory in this region of labor over capital. Behind a breastwork of huge steel bridge pieces these strikers protected themselves, and through pieces of tiling just large enough to admit a rifle barrel, they poured ball after ball into the sides of the barges. Still above this, on the north side of the river, a cannon was planted, and fired shot after shot into the three hundred imprisoned detectives. The fury of these men fighting for what they termed their bread and butter, can never be described and it will go down into the history of labor troubles as the fiercest battle ever waged.

Another cannon was planted on the south side of the river, but Providence seemed to be with the men on the barge, for with the first shot fired from this hastily improvised gun it flew to pieces, and although it sent one poor man to meet his maker, the 300 on the boat escaped a terrible death.

Down to the water's edge could be seen the greasy splash of oil, where, time and time again, by means of a force pump, the men tried to saturate the boat and burn the imprisoned men alive. This, too, failed, as did the carload of oil that was fired and started down the incline in hopes that the burning, floating oil would reach the barges and cremate all on board. A white handkerchief was finally seen to flutter from the barge as a signal of surrender, and after a long and heated debate in one of the furnace rooms of the big mill the judgement of the cooler heads prevailed, and the Pinkertons were allowed to come ashore. The silver badges were stripped from their coats, and their clothes torn and carried off as souvenirs. Once aboard the train the windows and shutters were tightly closed and as the engine steamed from the wooden platform, a cheer went up that was echoed and re-echoed from hill to hill.

The burning hulks of the two barges floated down the river just as the sun cast its first rays across the stream. Whether they contained the dead bodies of some ill-fated men will never be known, as the black and charred hulks disappeared from view beneath the water and a ripple marked their resting place only for a moment. VAN.

Letter from Yardville, N. J.

EDITORS KENT NEWS:—I left Kent about two weeks since, being summoned home to assist in the Sylvan Medical Depot, of which Dr. S. Hutchinson is proprietor, and who is well known by many in Kent. On my arrival here I found vegetation suffering from drought, no rain having fallen of any amount for several days; but the rains of the past week have revived vegetation and the prospect is now more flattering. The grain crop is good; pears and apples light; but peaches very promising, every tree, even on the roadside, being overloaded with fruit, seemingly perfect; none falling.

Dr. Hutchinson is quite an amateur gardener, and has growing vegetables and flowers from seed from the four quarters of the globe. Such as were brought from Africa and New Mexico seem to have not suffered in the least from the drought. There is no section of the country more charming than this at this time, with its romantic drives through the archways of majestic oaks, shellbarks, &c. Located near the Sylvan Lake as it is, it affords plenty of fishing, with but little success.

The "Hotel de Zwirlein" is one of the finest and best appointed road houses in the State, and many gentlemen with their families drive out from Trenton and Bordentown to enjoy the hospitality of the genial landlord.

Having been here but a short time, I have not had an opportunity to collect much news, but in my next will give you a more interesting communication, the manner of living and doings of the one hundred Russian Jews employed in the cotton mill, the life and doings of the "Dirty Dozen," and how the electric railroad of Trenton is to be extended to Yardville, &c. MOORE.

Persist in Working on Sunday.

CHICAGO, June 29.—J. H. Dortsch, of Paris, Tenn., has written a letter to A. F. Ballenger, secretary of the National Religious Liberty Association, whose headquarters are in this city, calling attention to the case of his companions, W. S. Lowry, J. Moon, J. Stevenson and himself, who are now in jail in Paris on a charge of breaking the State Sunday law. The prisoners believe in Saturday instead of Sunday worship, and observing the former day, perform their ordinary farm duties on the latter. Mr. Stemm is sixty years old and has spent three months in jail already for a similar offense. The fine of each was $25, as as they would not pay it they were condemned to jail. The writer claims it would take all their small property to meet the demands of persistent fines. The letter concludes with this statement: "Judge Swiggart, in answer to the sheriff's protest that we were conscientious in the matter, replied: 'Let them educate their consciences by the laws of Tennessee.'"

Did You Ever Try.

A glass of hot water for sleeplessness?

Rose-water and glycerine for sunburn?

Grated horse-radish and vinegar for neuralgia?

Borax water for removing stains from the hands?

Kerosene oil for taking out iron rust and fruit stains?

Putting paper bags over fruit cans to exclude the light?

To keep a cash account and to teach a girl to do the same?

To keep your closets free from old shoes and soiled garments?

CLEVELAND, '92.

A Rallying Song For The Cleveland Delegation.

BY JESSIE H. BROWN.

Tune—"Bringing in the Sheaves."

Hear the tramp of armies, see the host advancing;
Lift aloft the banner, tell its legend o'er!
See the flashing colors, sunlight on them dancing,
Hear the watchword echoed, "Cleveland, '92!"

REFRAIN.

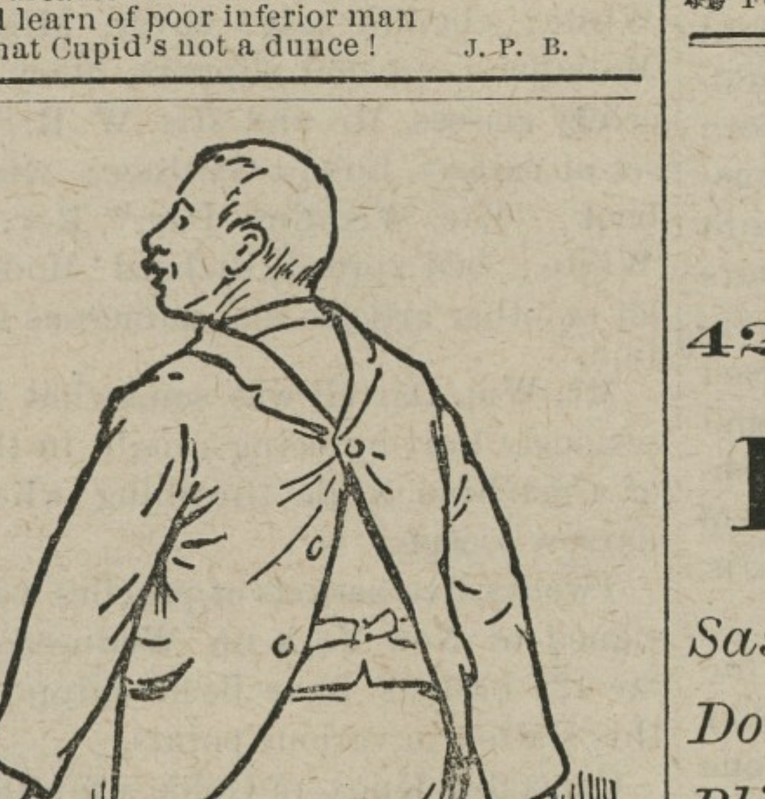

"Cleveland, '92! Cleveland, '92!"
Pass along the watchword, "Cleveland, 92!"

Armies from the eastward, from the land of story,
Turn with songs of praises toward a virgin shore;
Armies from the westward sunset gates of glory,
Pass along the watchward, "Cleveland, '92!"

Higher lift the banner, speed the exaltations,
O'er and o'er again the shout in strength outpour,
'Till it be a welcome, given to the nations,
And the world be praising "Cleveland, '92!"

To The Girl Graduate.

Fair fledgling of delightsome June,
Sweet scholar of the year,
Think you by mastering cube and rune
To witch a wondering sphere?
There's twice the power in your eyes
That Archimedes knew
When, had a fulcrum crowned his sighs,
He'd crack the world in two!
You've roamed the Mountains of the Moon,
And traced Primordial Man,
And wondered why, when gone so soon,
This life he e'er began!
But, prithee, "grave and raverend" miss
'Mid all your learning seek
And tell us why he'd rather kiss
Your two lips than your check?
Come down from Learning's chilly height,
Let go your "Guiding Star,"
And laugh a ripple to the night
And plink the gay guitar!
That broad low brow lot roses span—
It dreamed of Plato once—
And learn of poor inferior man
That Cupid's not a dunce! J. P. B.

The wrong way, with Catarrh, is to stop it without curing it. The poisonous, irritating snuffs, strong caustic solutions, "creams," balms and the like may, perhaps, palliate for a time. But they may drive the disease to the lungs. The wrong way is full of danger.

The right way is a proved one. It's with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cures, perfectly and permanently, by its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh. It has proved itself right, thousands of times, when everything else has failed.

And this makes its proprietors willing to prove that it's the right thing for you, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing.

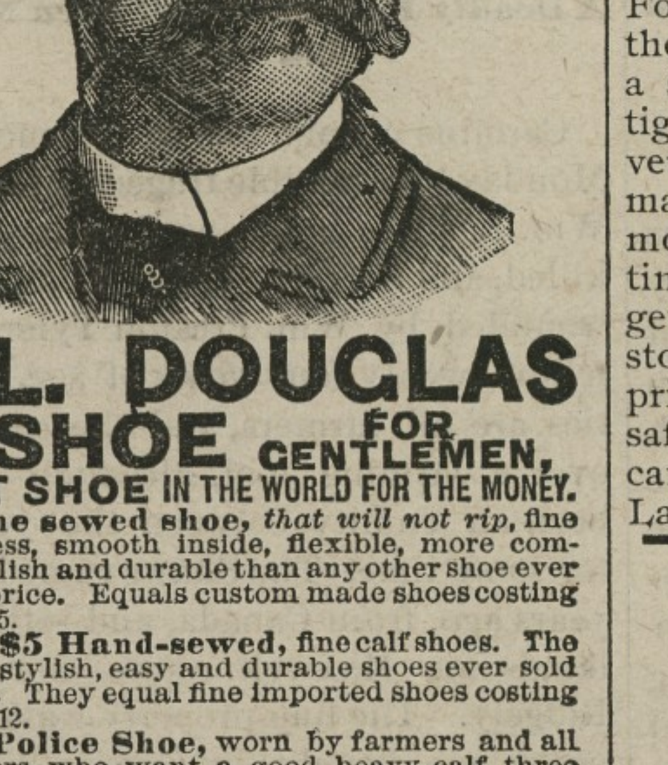

If they can't cure your Catarrh, they'll pay you $500 in cash.

They mean it.

They're certain of their medicine.

New Discovery by Accident

—SILK DRESS— FREE TO INTRODUCE IT.

HAIR ON THE NECK, FACE, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON

quickly desolved and permanently removed with QUEEN'S ANTI-HAIRINE, the new and wonderful discovery. Discovered by accident, while compounding a solution, a part was accidently spilled on the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. It is perfectly harmless. and so simple any child can use it. Lay the hair over and apply for a few minutes, and the hair disappears as if by magic. No scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. Thousands who have been annoyed with hair on their FACE, NECK and ARMS attest its merits. It cannot fail. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently, the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require one or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application without the slightest pain or injury when applied or ever afterward. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming can also use it. Harmless as water.
