THE ASSESSMENT BILL.

The "Hayes bill" received so many hard knocks that a short history of its career will not, be uninteresting.

The features of the old Hayes bill are known to every one at all interested in reassessment. Probably no act ever passed by the General Assembly has undergone as much discussion in the newspapers and on the hustings as that famous measure.

At the beginning of the present session Mr. Hayes introduced the bill in exactly the same form in which it had passed both houses two years ago and was subsequently vetoed by the Governor. The contest over the bill became warm, and owing to the outcry raised by the State press in favor of the bill it soon became apparent that it would probably be passed by both houses and again be vetoed by the Governor, who announced that he was opposed to it and was in favor of what was known as the Field bill which had been introduced in the House by Mr. Chas. W. Field of Baltimore City.

Excitement regarding the bill became great, and in the midst of it, on Monday night, January 29, the now celebrated Rennert House conference was held, at which were present Senator Gorman, Governor Brown, Senator Hayes, Mr. Rasin and the late Mr. Charles J. M. Gwinn.

At this conference, under the inspiration of Senator Gorman, who acted as arbiter between Governor Brown and Mr. Hayes, a compromise was agreed upon by which the Hayes bill was modified in certain particulars, and all agreed to support it and push it rapidly to final passage.

The Compromise Bill.

The items involved in the compromise may be recapitulated as follows:

Valuation of personalty to be made by the assessors and not by the owners; bonds to be taxed in the hands of the holders and not by corporations issuing them; the bond-scaling feature is dropped; the jail feature is dropped; the special law in regard to savings banks will not be interferred with; there will be no interferring with the State Tax Commissioner in performing duties now imposed upon him by law; tunnels will be taxed according to actual value, as other property is assessed: provision for quadrennial revaluation by boards of control and review to be appointed by the Governor. The bill is to be known as the Hayes bill.

Immediately after the compromise bill was introduced the storm broke loose again, and the bill so far from being passed immediately, was held up for over five weeks. Opposition from all sides was heard. The commercial interests of the city of Baltimore particularly protested. The objections finally terminated in hostility to any assessment bill whatever, and when the compromise bill was finally reported to the Senate it was believed by many to be only another step toward its ultimate defeat and failure to pass even the Senate, where it had been first introduced.

Since it has been before the Senate it has had its ups and downs, and when the amendment was adopted to tax mortgages even Senator Hayes himself thought the fate of his pet measure was sealed and its burial but a matter of a few short days.

Modifications in the Bill.

Later the mortgage tax was so modified as to amount to a tax of 8 per cent. on the income derived from mortgage investments and the bond-scaling feature of the Hayes bill was added to it was more. Still later the mortgage tax clause was so amended as to exclude from its operations mortgages held by building or homestead associations as well as the value of the portions of the shares of such associations as may be represented by mortgages on real or leasehold property, when such property is subject to taxation by the laws. This amendment was the last amendment adopted, and the bill, as arranged by the compromise, with the changes specified, is the bill passed by the Senate.

Cutting Down Trees!

It is astonishing to see the numbers of peach trees that are being cut down, not only in Kent county but in other counties on the same shore. At least 5,000 trees have been hewn down near Locust Grove and in Quaker Neck nearly as many. It is estimated that at least 75,000 trees have been cut down in Kent county during the past two or three years.

In Queen Anne's the destruction of peach orchards is equally as great. Near Chester bridge Mr. Howard Stewart is taking up his entire peach orchard of about 1500 trees. Mr. John A. Friel is also taking up an orchard. Mr. George Welch, Sr., will take up his entire orchard of about 1,000 trees.

A dispatch from Easton on the subject says:

About half of the peach trees in Talbot county have been destroyed this year by their owners because of the uncertain and unprofitable features of the peach crop in recent years. Few young trees were planted last year, a hard fact for the nurserymen. The land from which the peach trees are removed will go to tomatoes and other vegetables, grain and grass.

Most products on Talbot soils cease to crop well after a certain number of years. At the beginning of the century, and for many years before, tobacco was the staple in Talbot county. Farmers grew it year after year until it would grow no longer. Then they abandoned it for wheat and corn, the yield of which per acre is increasing up to this time. Chemists have found how to put back through commercial fertilizers the constituents of the soil those grains exhaust year after year. When these manures are not used the yield is less than it was fifty years ago.

There is an interesting story of the introduction of the peach into America more than two hundred years ago. About three miles from Easton there is an estate called Peach Blossom, which is at the head of a creek of the same name. It was the seat of the historical Robins family, who came from England and took that estate when Maryland was very young. The direct descendants of the first Robins of Maryland live now in Philadelphia. The surname no longer exists in Talbot county, though it appears in the Christian names of members of the Goldsborough, the Hollyday and other families.

One of the family, Thomas Robins, was a great traveler, and roamed all over the accessible regions of the world. In Persia he found the peach, a fruit then unknown in England and America, and brought to Maryland with him some peachstones, which he planted on the estate his brother had just settled upon. When the trees blossomed the flowers were so much admired that the name of the estate was changed from Arcadia to Peach Blossom. If there never was a time when this story was not believed it is so far back in the past as not to be located. A stone tablet on the Peach Blossom estate once gave the date of the planting of the peach-stones but it has disappeared in the general wreck and ruin of the place, whose glories have departed many, many years ago.

Some persons have a theory that the peach is an improved variety of almond. The almond has a thin shell around the stone, which splits open and shows the stone when mature. It is explained that in the peach this outer shell has become fleshy. A recent writer who has given much attention to the history of this fruit claims that the peach, as we have it now, was grown in Babylon four thousand years ago. It must have been many years before this that the peach was improved from the almond, a circumstance that ought to show the great antiquity of the fruit.

Possibly gardening in some respects was as scientific thousands of years ago as it is a present. The Phœnicians thousands of years ago, as is proved by their records, had in their gardens apricots, almonds, bananas, citrons, figs, grapes, olives, peaches and pomegranates. Even sugar-cane was in extensive cultivation. Certainly this shows how far advanced these were in garden culture.

Now Try This.

It will not cost you anything and will surely do you good, if you have a Cough, Cold, or any trouble with Throat, Chest or Lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to give relief, or money will be paid back. Sufferers from La Grippe found it just the thing and under its use had a speedy and perfect recovery. Try a sample bottle at our expense and learn for yourself just how good a thing it is. LAST week's Delaware papers contained an account of the queer antics of Levin S. Lowe, of Laurel. One night he made the rounds of the town going from house to house in great haste. He would open the door without knocking and standing upon the threshold, say: "Peace be unto this house; the Lord is with you. Blessed be His name." Then he hasten to another house and repeat his strange act.

"You understand, Betty," said the mistress, "that we are to move out of his house the first of next month?" "Yes'm," answered Betty, "I've been sweepin' all the dirt into the registers for the last three weeks, mum."
