PEERLESS!

TRADE MARK

CORN and TOMATO PHOSPHATE!

The leading farmers and canners throughout New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland speak in its highest praise, declaring it to be positively THE CHEAPEST, THE SAFEST and THE BEST in use. Once a trial, always a patron. Wouldn't it be a good idea for you to try them? Farmers who have not tried our Tomato Phosphate will consult their interest by doing so upon their next crop. Many farmers think that all Phosphates are alike, but a fertilizer apparently the same by analysis on paper may show a Vast difference when tested on the soil.

Testimonials.

KENNEDYVILLE, MD., Jan. 3, 1894.
T. R. HUBBARD & SON—Gentlemen:—I used your Peerless Phosphate on Tomatoes and Corn spring of '93 with gratifying results, notwithstanding the extraordinary drought. Will use it again this spring.
Yours respt.,
LEWIS C. JUSTIS, JR.

WORTON, Dec. 27, 1893.
Gentlemen:—In answer to your question, will say that I think your Tomato Phosphate can't be beat. Whilst I say it myself, the finest average of Tomatoes I ever saw grow were of my own growing this last season, and that was with your Phosphate. They were universally admired as my wagons were hauling to the cannery. I believe it to be a first-class stuff, and expect to use more this coming season.
W. H. FRENCH.

MR. WM. R. ALLABAND, of Wyoming, Del., says: I used your Fertilizer on Tomatoes by the side of Green Bone Phosphate and Sun Guano. The Green Bone was cracked so high I put it next to the road to show off big, and the Sun Guano next, and the last, Hubbard's, away back, as its merits were kept quiet; but when visitors came to see my patch of Tomatoes, I always pointed out the ground on which all three kinds were, and Hubbard's got the credit of being far superior to the others. When picking time came it was all and all. I have used it on other crops with the same result, and believe it to be the best Phosphate on the market.

MR. J. B. HANWAY, of Joppa, Harford, Md., used the first year 8 tons; next, 24 tons; next 55 tons; and the next he and his brother used and sold together 98 tons, and it not only gave satisfaction last season, but wherever used.

JAMES R. MASSEY, of Darlington, Harford, Md., says he grew for the canners. Used our goods alongside of Dis, Animal Bone and Oriole Phos., and that his product netted him $14 more per acre.

CHESTERTOWN, MD., 893.
T. R. HUBBARD & SON—Gentlemen:—Yes, I use ton of your Tomato Phosphate purchased of you and used last year, did well. I had my Tomatoes in a young pear orchard of one-year-old trees. I applied the Phosphate by sowing broadcast and cultivating it in. The fruit was large, smooth and perfect, and whilst it is almost incredible, feel sure that my yield was 16 tons to the acre, but I know that Lamotte paid me for over 15 tons per acre. I know it did splendidly for me.
Respectfully, R. S. EMORY.

CHESTERTOWN, January 3, 1894.
Gentlemen:—I am frank to say that I consider your Tomato Fertilizer a most excellent article. I happened to have a little of Lister's on hand which cost several dollars more than yours, and when I came to the cannery Mr. Downey asked me why it was that some loads of my tomatoes were better than others. I answered, that is easily explained, the good ones are grown with Hubbard's Phosphate. I will want more the coming season.
Respectfully, JAS. A. FRENCH.

CHESTERTOWN, Jan. 2, 1894.
Gents:—In reply to your question as to my opinion in regard to your Tomato Goods, must say it is a good goods from the fact the finest Tomatoes grown and brought to my cannery were grown with your Phosphate. I remember one of my growers would bring some loads that were particularly fine, while others were not. I asked what made the difference, and he replied Hubbard's was used on the best, while another that cost more money, on the others. I believe your Tomato Phosphate to be an excellent article.
JOSEPH DOWNEY.

MR. ROBERT MOFFETT, near Chestertown, says:—Notwithstanding the drouth last year the PEERLESS made him the finest tomatoes he ever saw, and that this can also be vouched for by his neighbors.

Please send for one of our Tomato circulars as we have devoted several pages of same to TOMATO Culture telling how to grow a crop from beginning to end.

A. FRIEDMAN & CO.'S

GREAT REDUCTION SALE!

IN FULL BLAZE!

Only One, Two and Three of a Kind Now Left!

AT LENGTH, after due consideration, we arrive at the conclusion that another cut will sweep our counters clean and clear of all heavy weight goods. Notwithstanding the fact that our January and February Cut met with unparallelled success, and realizing that the month of March is usually the dullest one of the twelve we unhesitatingly make a few prices below which defy any and all competition:

MEN'S STORM OVERCOATS, only a few left, -	$6.00 to $7.00
MEN'S OVERCOATS, a Great Sacrifice, - - -	2.50 to 10.00
BOY'S OVERCOATS, the pile is low, - - - -	1.75 to 3.50
MEN'S SUITS, without reserve, - - - - -	3.50 to 10.00
YOUTHS' SUITS, age 13 to 19, - - - - -	2.50 to 6.00
CHILDREN'S SUITS, now is the time, - - -	90 to 3.50
Men's Pants including fine stripes, - - -	75 to 3.50
Boy's Knee Pants, - - - - - - -	25 to 50

Such offerings as referred to above we suffice to say would be money safely invested for the ensuing year if not in ready need. Thanking you for all past patronage and soliciting a future continuance, we remain

Very respectfully, yours,

ANOTHER
Big Cut in Prices
DO YOU EVER STOP TO THINK THAT
We Can Sell the SAME GOODS for Less Profit Than Our Competitors?
Why? because our expenses are so much less. We figure this way, suppose our expenses are $200 and that of our competitors $600, we can sell the same goods at a profit of 8 per cent. while they, to even things up, would be compelled to sell their goods at a profit of at least 24 per cent. It is unreasonable to ask them to sell at our prices. People come here expecting to buy cheaper than they can elsewhere. Well, we won't disappoint you, we must keep our reputation up for LOW PRICES and SQUARE DEALING.

Letter No. 6.

FROM CAPT. COLUMBUS A. LEARY.

GIBRALTAR, SPAIN, Feb. 4th, 1894.

MESSRS. WM. B. USILTON & SON:

The small piece of territory two-thirds surrounded by water, which comprises the English territory in Spain, and which is inhabited by a population representing many nations and several races, most of whom denominate themselves Gibraltarians, a large part of whom are shrewd traders. The town is on the side of the rock which faces the west or the side next the bay, is well built in Spanish style, paved with smooth Belgian blocks and kept very clean. As for the world renowned fortress, which has been the subject of so much literature and the scene of seventeen sieges, I personally entertain some peculiar opinions, only slightly modified by the faultless martial music, which even now comes in great volume into all of the doors and windows of the hotel and in keeping time with which about 3,000 sturdy young Britons in the uniform of artillery, infantry and carbineers are marching past, and which is varied in the morning by the sound of bugle and drum as the formidable detachment of troops, bearing the great key, march to and graciously open the water port, thus giving the people one more breakfast, and in the evening they, with the same pomp and grandeur march down and lock the great gate and return the key to its mysterious place of safe keeping, while the trumpeter announces that witches and bad dreams are shut out for the night. The proprietor of this fort has a kind of corner on forts, indeed forts appear to have been a favorite stock with him for many years, really we might call him a fort bull. He has great nerve as a plunger, the more a fort costs him to keep it the higher he pretends to value it. I never had the slightest hankering after fort property, possibly growing out of my knowledge of the method of yielding possession as well as the sometimes inconvenience of establishing title to the satisfaction of other jealous and covetous persons, indeed I believe, after thoroughly examining this property, if it was put up at a church raffle, and I should take a chance just to please the ladies, and should draw the prize, I should immediately swap it off for a potato patch, and if the other fellow was backward in making the trade, would throw in some Kent county railroad stock and a dog as boot.

STEAMSHIP FIELD, MEDITERANEAN SEA. February 7th, 1894.

Very much as people do when they expect to depart on a stage or train, on Saturday last settled bills and made preparations to go on board this ship. After a one o'clock breakfast on Monday, although we only knew when she sailed from New York with a 3,200 miles before her, but a little before 12 o'clock one of the waiters notified me that the ship was signaled from the fort and that my breakfast was ready, so we were soon in a boat with our traps, and early in the afternoon came alonside the big white ship, which we found much crowded with first cabin passengers, as she had in addition to those originally booked for her a considerable number from the crippled ship Morandruid, the captain has consented to remain in port until 6 P. M. in order to give some of the passengers a glance of Gibraltar. Promptly at the appointed hour the anchor is hove up and the ship heads up the Mediteranean for Algiers, in Africa. The weather is fine, and in the night previous to entering that port (which we did early in the morning) a ball was kept up until about 11 o'clock, in which the young people appeared to enjoy themselves very much. Early in the morning, with the French flag flying at the fore and the American at the next place of honor and the German at the peak, we enter the small artificial harbor of Algiers, where everything gives evidence of an advanced civilization. The comprehensive system of breakwater, the beautiful series of terraces rising one above another, in which the arches form the roof of the lower tiers of public store and other necessary structures form the floors of the great broad streets which rise one above another. The handsome hotels and residences; the well stocked stores; the strong well fed horsee and mules; the long line of wine casks of handsome and substantial French cooperage (superceding the wretched wine and water bottle); the beautiful well-kept public squares, luxuriant in its structures, in which the date palm predominates, all make us inquire, is this Africa? Yes, it is Africa, but Africa subdued by French valor, and redeemed by French civilization. The land which first gave Rome a model in naval architecture, and caused the children of Carmelia Cincinatus and Regulus to tremble for their land and liberty, over which the conquering legions of Cipeo trod and appeared to leave behind them a lasting civilization, only to attract barbarians, vandals and even more relentless, rigorous sciens, becomes the home of the scholar and philosophers of the school of Bagdad on their road to physical and intellectual triumph, who are the high priests of real learning, conscientiously instruct the children of their inveterate enemies, they relapse into an effeminate superstition, and as the light which now shines over the land was not kindled by either miracle or a dream, let us hope that it may be enduring.

The Moors constitute far the larger part of the population, but he is no longer the sovereign but the subject. I notice among the people assembled in market places and squares a small proportion of Nubian and Sudan negroes, but more of the west coast tribe. Most of the native inhabitants are simply a duplication of those seen in Morocco. About the usual number of Moorish woman, of the lower class, are aimlessly sauntering along the streets, requiring one hand to hold a portion of the cape of their dress so as to cover their faces. A small hook or button would relieve the hand and restrain the curiosity which I notice is often gratified at the expense of the conscience. In some places large numbers of native are congregated at a kind of small markets of their own where shiftless condition of almost everything forms a great contrast with the attractive appearance of the French stalls and shops. While strolling through a densely populated part of the city unaccompanied by any associate, I witnessed a scene which much impressed me. The actor was a good-looking and apparently intelligent French tradeswoman who appeared to be conducting business on her own account on the one side, and a handsome, well dressed Moor on the other. So far as I could judge the conversation related to a business matter. His manner was that of one who had every confidence in his capacity and that she was a unit in a great advancing civilization, so much so that she used her power with kindness and consideration, while he who had been taught to doubt the existence of a soul in women, shifted from one foot to the other, glanced briefly into her face, then looked around or at the ground for inspiration, and appeared to deplore his own misfortune in his not possessing a soul which could withstand her glances.

Leaving Algeries we sail with pleasant weather to the eastward, towards Naples, distant less than 700 miles, over seas which for hundreds of years were the scenes of conflict between Greek and Carthagenian, and Carthagenian and Roman, and over which Paul, many years afterwards, made his memorable voyage to Rome. After a breakfast, served especially early for the convenience of passengers they begin to land. Many of the passengers, are completely intoxicated with the beauty and sublimity of the scene from the ship's deck, upon which are about seven cords of luggage. But old stagers look thoughtful and anxious, they know that between them and this promised land, now full in view, there rolls a turbid and furious Jordan, known as the Naples Custom House, backed and reinforced by a countless number of Lagerinoes, who labor under the delusion that they speak some English. I had no idea before that so small an amount of English could produce so large an amount of lying, petty impudence and villiany. A soon as we come to the landing each boat or launch is nearly sunk and quite captured by a hungry swarm; in about one minute you are rendered entirely useless, and your eyes can render but little service, as you are pushed off your baggage and your feet by a multitude so extensive that you don't know who to blame, and may catch sight of your things by accident as they pass over men's heads to an official's table, and to which you cannot get, or if you should get there it is only to be swept by in a torrent, as a number of persons announce that you are fined for not declaring the contents of trunks, when, in fact, you have had neither opportunity given you or breath left in you to declare anything. It was both provoking and amusing to see ladies spreading their rich and costly wraps about them and trying to hover their effects for a short time, which was not much more effectual than would be the effort of a hen in attempting to shelter her brood from a stampede of mules.

The officials appeared to have very little to do with the whole affair. Somebody prepared for me a receipt in delicate and elegant writing for 5.15 fienks as a duty on a little piece of tobacco. The mob appeared to put their seal upon it by tearing it in pieces and then handing it to me with the warning to keep it in good order while in the country, or I would be fined. One fellow, whose whole moral nature appeared to have been corrupted by the delusion that he spoke a little English, was continually crying out the different sums he had advanced for me in apeasing the mob or satisfying the much dreaded officials, and after reaching a place of comparative quiet, in each recital of services and expenses the amount rapidly increased to accommodate itself to the length of my purse or degree of my stupidity.

ATLANTIC CITY IN MARCH.

A Baltimore Lady Found It Most Delightful There.

The 4th of March, 1894, was as striking a contrast as can be conceived with the last 4th. That was memorable as bringing almost an arctic blizzard, which imperiled health and life in those participating in the inaugural ceremonies of President Cleveland. But in this year 1894 March might be called May, for since the first day mild zephyrs have wafted their breath upon the sailors and the invalids, and invited all mankind to outdoor life in this locality. Old Ocean presents as unruffled a front as he possibly can, and his boisterous moods seem almost forgotten as matters of long ago. The sky is blue and serene, and the board walk is thronged with seekers for reviving draughts of salt air. There is an indescribable fascination about the wide expanse of the sea as there is in watching the rushing of the rapids at Niagara or gazing upon the mighty cataract and watching the seething foam and dashing spray. The one dominant impression is the ceaselessness of the motion in beholding both the sea and the falls of Niagara.

Years ago the writer never heard of people seeking the seaside in winter, but we all know Atlantic City's favored position on the coast makes it a proper and beneficial resort for persons in health or invalids at this season. It is to me a matter of sad surprise to meet and know the appalling proportion of sick people who are vainly in quest of health. One recognizes the fact of sickness in the appearance of multitudes, and can but feel a desire to call attention to this lamentable fact, hoping to change this condition of things. Americans are so full of energy and intellect that if only our physical strength can be improved, there will be an almost limitless advantage in consummating more wonderful results in the next century than have been accomplished in the one now soon to close.

I have read somewhere that the road to reform in anything is: First, to feel something wrong; second, to find out what the trouble is; third, to learn the cause: fourth, to wish to remove it: fifth, to know what ought to be done, and lastly, to do it.

The want of physical health; is a most palpable want of our time and generation: multitudes of both men and women, young and old are invalids, and though many may look fairly well, we find upon inquiry their appearance is deceptive, and they are not healthy.

How can we teach the laws of health and awaken in the nation an earnest resolve to put them in practice. I appeal earnestly to my sister women diligently to strive after better health, and to live more wisely.

In the modern ways of living we almost utterly defy common-sense modes of daily life, and recklessly pursue our own gratification, blindly following the customs of our day, which are destruction to health, and we reap the sad consequences. An army of ailing women move painfully along in their little journey, sadly unable to competently perform their duties as daughters, sisters, wives and mothers. Let us apply our faculties of heart and mind to study reformation in our modern style of living. Tight waists, burdensome, trailing skirts, house too hot, hours too late, entirely wrong eating, are doing an incalculable amount of almost irreparable mischief to our individual lives and to the coming generation. In the matter of diet I am amazed at the quantities of unwholesome dainties and luxurious food Americans permit themselves to consume. We should steer clear of the Scylla of unreasonable abstemiousness (the fault of the far-greater minority), and the Charybdis of over-indulgence on the other hand.

The earnest desire of the writer is to enlist the co-operation of women in learning how to regain health and conscientiously apply the rules of wisdom to their conduct in domestic management.

We would recommend as a text book to our readers a book called "The New Method" as sensible and practical.

The Cheapest Feed on Earth.

"A Farmer" writes as follows on the above important subject to the Easton Democrat:

Nearly every agricultural paper of this country is now advocating the feeding of ensilage. It can be grown and stowed in the silo for about $1.25 a ton. This feed is far superior to dry feed. I have been feeding it now for three years to my milch cows and find I cannot do without it. During the last season the farmers at the canning house on Dover road, have put up a hundred or more tons; made of the caps of sweet corn which they are selling at $2 a ton. A cow will eat from 30 to 50 pounds per day, or in other words about 5 cents worth a day. Now if you can get good feed for 5 cents a day every poor man may keep a cow. It seems to me this would be a good opportunity for all farmers and others contemplating building a silo, to send and get a ton and see what it is like. It is not only a good cattle feed, but it is good for sheep, hogs and poultry.
