YOUTHFUL SHIPBUILDERS.

The Handiwork of two Young Baltimore Boys.

Messrs. Alfred C. Layman, son of H. C. Layman, formerly of Kent, and Robert H. Buschmann, two young graduates of the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, have completed a steam launch at the Campbell-Zell Company's marine shops, which was entirely built by themselves. They began over two years ago to build the little steam pleasure craft. The work was all done by night, but that has not prevented her making a pretty picture when afloat. She is twenty feet long, four feet eight inches beam, and four feet deep. The hull is of white oak, and was constructed in a frame shed at the corner of Raborg and Arch streets — over two miles from the water front. When completed it was placed on a lumber wagon, hauled to the foot of Eutaw street, and launched with difficulty, sticking in the mud many times before being properly floated.

Her engine, which is of the Westinghouse pattern, cylinder 4 inches in diameter, with 3-inch stroke, was built in a Wilmington shop while the young men were apprentices there. The boiler was constructed in the back yard of City Councilman William J. Ogden's house, No. 113 North Carey street. It is a pipe boiler with three coils—24 inches, 18 inches and ten inches in diameter of 1½ inch pipe. The shell of the boiler was also bent in the yard. The difficulties under which the young men worked can be imagined, when they were forced to use a carpenter's brace to bore a ¾ inch hole through the steamdrum of ½ inch metal. The boiler has been tested to 240 pounds water-pressure, and has carried 100 pounds steam. The propellor was furnished them by Captain James McCoy, superintendent of the marine department of the Campbell-Zell Company, and is of his make, 17 inches in diameter and 36 inches pitch. A condenser and feed pumps will be attached to the engine, and the launch will then be complete. She is expected by her young builders to be very fast. Skilled mechanics have examined the work about the boat and say it is first class.

A STORY OF A DIAMOND.

A "Moonstone" Mystery in Real Life—Lost for Twenty Years.

By a curious combination of chances, says the Westminster Gazette, a valuable diamond, which was lost more than 20 years ago at Birmingham, has been discovered, and is now in the possession of Mr. Farndale, the chief constable. Some days ago one of the workmen in the employ of Messrs. Taunton, safe manufacturers, was engaged in repairing a safe, and came across a piece of paper in which was a large diamond, estimated to be worth at least £100. The condition of the paper indicated that the stone had been undisturbed for a long time, and the finder considered he was entitled to what he found.

Some inquiries were afterwards made at the pawnbroking establishment of Mr. S. J. Davis, in Smallbrook street, which resulted in the discovery that the owner of the safe, a Mr. Rowbotham, bought it four years ago from the late Mr. Davis, who sold a quantity of things on leaving Birmingham to take up his residence in London. Mr. S. J. Davis, the son, explained that some twenty years ago his father gave his mother a large diamond, which she placed in a piece of paper, with the name of her son, and then deposited somewhere for security. She did it so effectually that it could not be found afterward. This narrative together with fact that the piece of paper in which the diamond was wrapped does bear the name of Mr. Davis leaves little room for doubt that the stone belongs to him. The diamond had been placed at the back of an iron drawer in the safe.

How to Manage a Man.

"There has been within the past few years an almost endless amount of literature of various sorts, more or less sensible and coherent about how to manage a man" szid a middle aged woman of very wide observation and more than ordinary intelligence, as she laid down a so called "woman's paper" in which this subject was exhaustively treated. "It seems to me," she continued, "that the most sensible way to manage anybody is to treat him as though he were a sensible, rational being. I do not think that a man needs any special line followed out in the management of him if he has any manly qualities or a proper sense of the fitness of things. Of course, if one has to deal with cranks and eccentric and uncomfortable persons a special diagnosis of each case is often required. Such people are ill of a mental malady that needs as careful study and treatment as any other serious disease.

"The great mistake is that, as a rule, no effort is made to cure the patient; but, on the contrary, most of what is done seems to be in the direction of continuing, if not aggregating the trouble.

"Boys should grow up with the idea that they have duties to themselves and all the world, and that any special sort of coddling or cosseting is necessary in order to get along with them should never be permitted to enter their minds. There is too much reality in life to make it worth while to waste time and feeling and wear out the affection of friends in the silly notion that it is necessary to manage somebody in order to get along with him."

A Wedding Fancy.

At a recent wedding the bride gave to each of her six bridesmade an exquisitely embroidered handkerchief, each one containing the initials of the recipent. These handkerchiefs were carried at the wedding, and the bridesmaids when they shall occur. The last one to wed, or who remains in single blessedness, is to receive all the handkerchiefs.

Don't Diet.—If you have dyspepsia, indigestion, habitual constipation or sick headache, don't diet. You need the strength, that food gives. Eat whatever you want but take one of Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia pills after meals until cured. If you are constipated get a bottle with white label, otherwise with yellow.

WELL BALANCED

—the mind of the woman who knows the best medicine for her aches, pains and weakness, is to be found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a remedy which corrects and cures the distressing derangements and diseases peculiar to women, builds up and strengthens her system when she's weak, run-down and overworked. For an invigorating, restorative tonic, especially adapted to woman's needs —the "Favorite Prescription" is so positive in its effect that it is guaranteed. If it ever fails to benefit or cure, in cases for which it's advised, you have your money back.

What else can be "just as good" for you?

For bearing-down sensations, ulceration, inflammation, everything known as "female complaint," this is a remedy that's safe, certain, and proved.

Take it for the prompt relief it imparts.
