PEACH PROSPECTS.

...untain Peaches Badly Hurt—All Right In Kent County.

J. Mitchell Stover, the most extensive as well as the pioneer peach-grower in the Blue mountain belt, has been corresponding with a number of the largest growers in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware concerning the outlook for next year's peach crop. A letter from McGraw, Davis & Co., of Baltimore, whose orchards are located in Prince George's county and who are among the largest growers in Maryland, states that 40,000 of their trees are frozen, and that not more than 2 per cent. of the trees in that county are living. A grower in Mifflin county, Pa., who last year marketed 19,000 bushels of peaches, writes that 9 per cent. of his trees were frozen before the last cold snap.

Letters from Bridgeville, Del., report but little damage prior to the last cold snap and some damage by the cold snap. As for the Blue mountain belt, Mr. Stover, from examination of buds with his microscope, says the chief damage was done on January 13, at which time a considerable amount of buds were frozen. Trees above 1,000 feet altitude are very seriously damaged. Most of the orchards have an altitude of between 700 and 1,000 feet above the sea. He believes in this area a very fair crop is still safe. A discoloration of the sap of last year's growth complicates the matter and makes a doubtful question as to the final results.

The following is from a well posted citizen concerning the fruit crop in Kent county and Delaware: "It is a great winter for ...it. Three weeks more of this weather ...there will be more apples and peaches ...ear than there will be a market for. ...old weather is just what is needed to ...e a big crop. In the first place it keeps ...ck the buds and then the low temperature kills the insect enemies of the trees and fruit.

Mr. Henry J. Porter cut some buds a few days ago, placed them in water and now has peach blossoms on his table.

Mr. W. E. DeFord says he has passed through orchards that have not a live peach germ on them.

Death of a Kent Countian.

Ex-Mayor James Hodges died at his home in Baltimore, 515 Park avenue, Friday night, aged 72. He had been in failing health for some months and since Wednesday the end was expected. The end came peacefully. He was conscious up to within half an hour of his death, and he passed away surrounded by members of his family. James Hodges was born August 11, 1822, at Liberty Hall, Kent county, this State. He was the eldest son of Hon. James and Mary Hanson Ringgold Hodges, and was descended from William Hodges, a member of the Anglican Church, who came to Maryland from Virginia about the year 1665 and settled on a tract of land between Gray's Inn Creek and Chesapeake Bay, known as Liberty Hall. James Hodges, father of the deceased, was a farmer of the old Maryland type, genial and generous in disposition and extremely hospitable. He represented Kent, his native county, in the Legislature of Maryland during the sessions of 1823 and 1824. In 1821 he married Mary Hanson Ringgold, and died in 1832, leaving five children. Miss Ringgold was the youngest daughter of Dr. William and Martha Hanson Ringgold. For a period of two centuries the Ringgolds have been among the leading families of the State.

Mr. Hodges was lineally descended from six of the earlier settlers of Kent county—William Hodges, who settled in the county in 1665; Thomas Ringgold, 1650; Andrew Hanson, 1653; Simon Wilmer, 1688; Thomas Hynson, 1659, and Marmaduke Tylden, grandson of Sir William Tylden, in 1658.

To us in Kent county, it is the death of one of OUR OWN, for to the honor of James Hodges, be it said, he never forgot the place of his birth, nor indeed the friendships and claims of the old home and its citizens. The Baltimore Sun editorially referring to his death, says: In the death of James Hodges, Baltimore has lost one of its most valuable and estimable citizens. A man of decided force and individuality as well as of exceptional ability, he thoroughly deserved the high place which he held in the community. Although a business man of great energy, grasp of detail and sagacity, and one who was proud of his vocation, he did not limit his activity to mercantile pursuits, but felt and displayed an interest in all questions relating to the welfare of the community and of the country. He was, in fact, peculiarly qualified for public affairs and would have filled with credit and distinction official positions of even greater importance than those which he actually occupied. Few men in or out of Congress understood better than he the intricate problems connected with finance and tariff, which he grasped not merely in their business and practical aspects, but as a close student of the general principles involved in them. His prominent characteristics were his public spirit, his courage and his honesty. He was honest in politics and in business and both as a merchant and as a public man was true to all his obligations. He has served Baltimore well in his day and generation, and deserves to be held in grateful and honorable remembrance.

THE NEW AND BETTER WAY.—The days of private individual bonding have gone by and in place of asking one's relatives or friends to become security, whether on executors, administrators, trustees, receivers, contractors, corporation officers, employees, or any other kind of bond, large and responsible trust companies now assume all such obligations and relieve the individual of all trouble and embarrassment. Among such companies the American Banking and Trust company of Baltimore City stands as high as the highest and is worthy of the largest measure of public confidence and custom. The capital and stockholders liabilities is $400,000 with the right to increase to $1,000,000. The president of the company is the Hon. John Hubner.

It is said that Ex-Governor Jackson's influence will be strongly felt when the nominations for Senator are about to be made, and there are whispers of a combination with the friends of Col. John Walter Smith to control the result. But so many months are yet to pass before the matter of nominating a Senatorial candidate becomes pressing that little heed is paid to gossip. Between now and then a Governor is to be nominated and elected, and no one knows what changes may come during the campaign.

Not in years has there been so much enthusiasm among Republicans. They are still flushed with their recent victory. The more experienced among them predict that if they can only steer clear of factional fights, which have so often jeopardized their prospects, they will poll a larger vote in Maryland than ever in the history of the party. The Baltimore Republicans say that the nominee should come from the city. During the last 25 years there has been but one candidate for Governor from Baltimore on the Republican ticket—Walter B. Brooks—who ran in 1887 against Gov. Elihu E Jackson, who defeated him.
