I happened to pick up a circular embracing advertisements and testimonials for Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after reading them decided to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial. * * * Speaking as one of that large class in our community, the farming fraternity, we should not, we think, be entirely discouraged, it is seldom there is so general a failure in crops, together with such a shrinkage in prices. The end of falling values may have been reached. We must continue our efforts with renewed vigor, and by a closer attention to the many details, a greater variety of crops, smaller acreage with larger yields, will enable us to stem the adverse current. The farmer, while he has not grown richer within the last few years, has, or ought to have at least, grown wiser. We have been taught to believe that it was within the province and power of the government to amend our grievances, to restore prices, and give good times, and thus we have listened with attentive ear to the many delusive and empty promises of the political parties, one for instance rallying the people to the principles of protection, and the blessings of higher taxation; another singing the now mournful tunes of tariff reform, the tangible benefits of which come fearfully slow. While we know there are certain favored classes that bear with infinitive dependency upon the strong arm of the government, it is, we believe at least, not within the power of the same to give the great agricultural interests anything more than such indirect aid as spring from a government run upon honest, economical and impartial principles. The price of the great staples, wheat and corn, as well as the smaller crops, are regulated by the capricious laws of supply and demand. We do think, however, Messrs. Editors, locally there are some wrongs that might be righted, some reforms inaugurated tending to relieve our people of the heavy taxation now levied upon them. Our county within the late past has been greatly improved, its roads, bridges and public buildings. Nothing by way of improvements has been left undone that could be accomplished. Our county financial managers have shown a public spirit, a liberality bordering almost upon prodigality. Should there not now be a suspension of improvements? a curtailing of expenses, the adoption of an economic system in keeping with the times and value of farm products, from which the bulk of our taxes are derived? We do not wish, however, to censure those intrusted with public duties, it is one thing to suggest, another to execute. Before a twelfth month rolls around the people will themselves pass judgment upon these and other issues.

OCCASIONAL.

[NOTE.—The well written introduction to the above is omitted—treating as it did only of the weather and we have had a full supply of him.—EDS.]

WILLIAM COX, a citizen of Monticello, Ky., ate his New Year's dinner at a table around which sat three of his living wives and he is only thirty-eight years of age. This, at the first glance, appears to be an astounding condition of affairs, but it is easily explained. His first wife was Miss Minerva Smith, who bore him nine children, and was then divorced. Mr. Cox then married Miss Julia Stephens. No children resulted from this union, and she also for some reason, was divorced. He then wedded his present spouse, a Tennessee lady, and seven children blessed their home. His divorced wives have found other husbands, and there is now a feeling of perfect harmony and good will existing between the three households. On New Year's day Mr. Cox spread a banquet at his home, and invited his two former wives and their families to partake of his hospitality. They gladly responded and the day passed without a ripple of unpleasantness to mar the joys of the occasion.

The matrimonial hero was first married at the age of fourteen, and if he lives out his allotted thee-score and ten and keep up his past record, he will stand without a rival. Three wives and sixteen children at 38 is not bad.

Swallowed a Lizard.

The case of Mr. Samuel Allcorn, of near Stanton, Delaware, who discovered that his strange malady was caused by a lizard in his stomach, is another warning against drinking without first examining the water and will apply to the careless habit of taking medicines in the dark. One day last week Mr. Allcorn, took an emetic for the purpose of relieving his stomach of some trouble which the attending physician, could not understand. The result was that a lizard was thrown from the stomach, after which the patient showed signs of improvement.

For some time Mr. Allcorn has been suffering from what he thought was dyspepsia. Recently the suffering became almost continual. The physician was somewhat mystified by the symptoms and suggested an emetic, which was used with the strange result. The patient does not know just how he came by the unwelcome tenant, but he is of the opinion that he must have swallowed it while drinking at a spring some time last summer.—Cecil Whig.

To Cruise Around the World.

Capt. Joshua Slocum, whose life has been full of adventures, is about to leave Boston for a cruise around the world in the sloop spray, which is only 35 ft. long and of but 13 tons register. The Spray was built by Captain Slocum, who is well-known in Baltimore, where he bought the famous clipper bark Aquidneck. He lost the bark on the coast of Brazil, and from her timbers built the queer boat Libertad, in which he sailed over five thousand miles to Baltimore, accompanied by his family. He was afterward in one Peixoto's men-of-war, purchased in New York to fight the Brazilian insurgents. While on his cruise around the world Captain Slocum will furnish letters to a syndicate of newspapers.

"CAN you let me have $5? I left all my money at home, and haven't a cent with me," said Johnnie Fewscads to his friend Hostetter McGinniss. "Sorry I can't lend you $5, but here is a nickel car fare. You can ride home and get your money," replied Hostetter.

BERT—I don't see any use in this geography lesson. Mattie—Why, you goosey, it's of the greatest use. It tells you where to go when you can't get there, and describes the country and all that. If we had no geography, we'd get lost all over the world.

The Peach Crop Liar.

No blizzard that blows can freeze him,
No hurricane sweep him away,
He is here in all states of the weather
And he's presumably right here to stay.
No matter how tight in his clutches
The frost holds the sap in the roots,
He'll swear that till next season's peaches
Won't fill up a pair of his boots.

There's no use to try to denounce him,
He's proof against pity and scorn,
He's awake half the night making stories
To spring on the world in the morn.
In the summer he says that the yellows
Has killed ten per cent. of the crops,
And in winter he finds the buds ruined
Every time the thermometer drops.

His fancy is as bright as a fairy's,
He can look learned, haughty and wise,
And as for knowing his business,
He's really an artist in lies.
He's worse than a bull on the market,
More dangerous still than a bear,
For all of his choice quotations
Are based on the state of the air.

He's with us, however, forever;
He never grows older a day,
He's as fresh in the depth of the winter
As a man in the midst of life's May;
And even in a contest with Satan,
With his toes toasting over the fire,
You'll find him still gay and undaunted—
The peach crop interm'nable liar.

TOPICS BRIEFLY TREATED.

Seasonable Paragraphs on Agricultural Subjects

One of the reasons not usually given for the selling off of the sheep by a large number of farmers last year is that the drought lessened the supply of pasturage. Sheep will pay a profit to any farmer who will produce early lambs and fat wethers. Wool is only a product of the sheep and farmers who overlook the large mutton breeds in order to sheep for wool only are depriving themselves of two sources of profit for only one. In England sheep are made to pay on high-priced land, and it can be done just as easily in this country.

Straw is not very highly relished by stock, and sheep care but little for it. The cattle, however, will sometimes eat quite a proportion of straw, as it affords them a change of food. Cut up fine and mixed with other foods, with ground grain added, it may be made to do excellent service.

It is now reported that the disease which carries off chinch bugs will also destroy grasshoppers, lice and bed-bugs. The disease is communicated by placing diseased bugs in a field infected with chinch bugs.

Seeding down to oats will be one of the first duties in early spring, where such a crop is desired. If the land is in good condition plenty of seed should be used, nine pecks per acre not being too much. If clover seed is sown on the oats, the oats should be harrowed in and the clover seed then sown, running the roller over the field, which will prevent destruction of the seed of both oats and clover by birds.

The Michigan Experiment Station has been experimenting with rape, and reports that one acre of rape will support nine lambs and produce a gain of 191 pounds in seven Weeks. It is a summer crop, being sown in drills, in July.

The heavy snows will greatly impede travel, and when the frost begins to come out of the ground early in spring the roads will be in even a worse condition, as only the drifting of the snow interferes with the use of roads, and the comparison is now in favor of frozen roads. Taxes for good roads is paying a small sum for a large benefit.

The cost of getting a crop to market has much to do with the matter of profit or loss, and the value of good roads and their cost in taxes should not be considered from a stand point of economy of construction, but from the possible result in the future. The difference in profit from a single crop will more than pay the farmer for his share in the construction of good roads.

White clover is one of the best foods for sheep and it affords excellent pasturage for cows. It is also a honey-producing plant, and the bees can work on it, although they cannot procure honey from the red variety.—Philadelphia Record.

He Probably Guessed It.

"No, I don't want it cut, and I don't want it trimmed," snarled the shaggy haired young man, seating himself in the chair glaring savagely at the barber, "and I'm not a football player nor a pianist, and I haven't taken any vow not to have it cut. Perhaps that will save you the trouble of asking questions. All I want is a shave."

"Yes, sir."

The barber worked in silence for ten minutes.

"I have a brother," he remarked at last, "that's got a head shaped just like yours. He has to wear his hair the same way."—Chicago Tribune.

Righteous Indignation.

Mrs. Youngma—Oh, I'm so boiling over with righteous indignation I don't know what to do. I'd like to bite somebody.

Friend—Whom?

"Whom? Why, those coarse, brutal inhuman owners of the St. Quiet flats. They refused to rent to me."

"Everybody knows that they object to children, my dear."

"Yes, of course—but they objected to mine."—New York Weekly.

MRS. D'AVNOO — I wish you would not spend your time reading those emotional novels. Miss D'Avnoo—Oh, this is not emotional a bit! It is purely financial. The heroine marries the man her mother picks out.

"YOUR new servant girl is very pious, I hear?" "Yes, if she was as careful about the crockery as she is about the ten commandments she would be a jewel."

UNTIL some great authority definitely locates the conscience, people will never know when they should repent, or take something for the liver.

THE Baltimore City papers announce the oyster market at "a stand still." How could it be otherwise with all the boats frozen up?

Bicycle Run on Ice.

Mr. Wm. C. LeCompte, captain of the Cambridge Cycle Club, started on his bicycle on the ice for Baltimore at 12 o'clock noon Sunday last. The wind was nearly dead ahead and he proceeded with considerable difficulty and labor until he reached Poplar Island, above the mouth of Great Choptank river, about 20 miles from Cambridge. From that point he saw open water and this led him to believe that the portion of the bay between Swan point and the mouth of the Patapsco river where he intended to cross, might not be sufficently strong to insure his safe passage across it. In addition to this, being fatigued from riding against the wind, he determined to return, and he reached Cambridge about 5 o'clock, having ridden about 60 miles in 5 hours. He states that in most places there was just enough snow on the ice to make good wheeling and only once was he thrown from his wheel. He says a bank of snow and ice 30 or 40 feet high extended from Castle Haven across the river to the Talbot shore. He found several boats frozen in the ice which will be in danger when the thaw begins.

Died for Her.

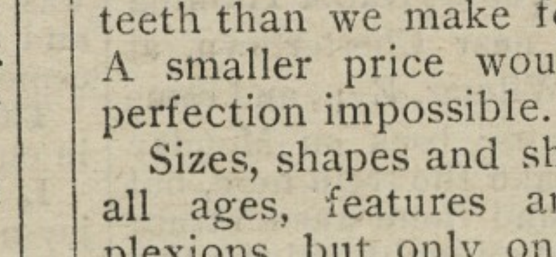

A dear dog I once had the pleasure of knowing belonged to my daughter, then a child about 13 years old, says a writer in the Animal's Friend. It had been her constant companion and playmate for years. Unfortunately the poor creature fell ill, and my daughter attended to him with most assiduous care for 12 days, but there seemed no signs of improvement. One day I followed her on one of her visits and could not help noticing how his eyes brightened and his tail wagged with pleasure at seeing her, but he was apparently too weak to rise.

My little girl was very downcast at seeing him thus, and whistling and snapping her fingers to him—the faithful creature made an effort, got up and raced with her as far as the stables, a distance of about 300 yards, where he fell dead at her feet. To please her he had done what he could, and died in the effort.

How to Preserve Old Manuscripts.

The paper or documents, after being cleaned or brushed, is washed on both sides with a transparent adhesive solution. Sheets of imported white silk of the most delicate fabric, large enough to give an ample margin or border to surround the document to be preserved, are then placed on each side of the record and pressed. The pressure causes the silk to adhere closely to the document, which is then treated to a coating of paraffin for the purpose of bringing out and making more legible the writing thereon. This process seals the document permanently from any danger of disintegration or fading of the ink, and also a protection against insects or mice, which might prey upon the ancient records.

MR. JOHN HENRY KEENE is interested in the protection of game in this State. He said to an American reporter a few days ago: "The disappearance of the ducks from the Havre de Grace flats and all our shores is wholly and solely attributable to bad laws, and no enforcement whatever of them even attempted. The Eastern Shore ducking points, from Easton to the superb feeding ground of the Synepuxent Bay, are in the armed possession of tramps from Delaware mostly, who live by firing upon the fowl on their nightly feeding grounds. A gentleman who attempted last winter to arrest one of these marauders, was fired upon by the practical crew. The state machinery is helpless and hopeless." Mr. Keene suggests that the sportsmen of Maryland should get together and effect an organization in each county with authority to appoint delegates to a State convention. Mr. Keene thinks it impossible to realize the advantages of such organizations within the next few years.

For Your Consideration.

To be happy you must be contented; to be contented you must feel that your home is secure, and your family provided for.

Have you a mortgage on your property? If you have you may be able to pay it off in time. If you die before it is lifted—who will pay it?

Would not a Life Insurance Policy be a good thing for you to carry, so that whatever happens, your property will be secure?

Most men work hard and take but little present comfort in order to secure future wealth. Yet 95 per cent. of men in business are not successful. Think of it!

Do not leave this matter of the future welfare of your family in doubt. Decide now and take a $5,000, $10,000 or $20,000 policy on your life, payable to yourself at 60 or 65 years, if you are then living. If you die before that time your family and business are protected. If you live, you will be well provided for. Meanwhile you can enjoy your present income, and at the same time leave your family provided for. Having paid your Life Insurance premium, you can freely spend the remainder of your income without the haunting fear of future want to the wife and children.

I will be pleased to make you a proposition for an investment contract in the largest and oldest Life Insurance Company in the world.
