BREAKING ROADS.

The present condition of the county ds gives the following article, taken from an exchange, an interest it might not otherwise have. It tells us of the process of "breaking" roads in New England:

"Some winter morning the highway surveyor of district N . 4 wakes up to find all familiar land-marks out of sight beneath a thick covering of snow which, it is more than likely, has drifted in huge heaps across the highway, wherever a fence, stone wall or clump of bushes has prevented the wind's unimpeded march. The highway surveyor, mindful of the important part he plays in maintaining the social fabric, wades out to the barn to feed his cattle—"cattle" being a New Englandism for a pair of oxen—which he yokes up after getting his own breakfast.

"His method of breaking a road is very simple. Under the front of an old-fashioned wood sled, with long runners, he chains a stick of wood six or eight inches in diameter, slips into the sockets a sled stake or two, to hold on by, mounts the sled and invites Buck and Bright to get up steam. Now Buck and Bright deserve no small credit in this matter, for besides generating the motive power for the sled they serve also as snow plows, plunging into the drifts and breaking down the snow to an extent that makes it comparatively easy for the sled to maintain an even keel, so to speak, even when the drifts are very irregular in construction.

"A little way down the road the highway surveyor will perhaps add a neighbor to his outfit, providing that the neighbor's taxes have not yet been wholly "worked out." If the drifts have been packed hard by the wind, it may be necessary to break the snow up a little before Buck and Bright can get through, but the cattle are quite sure to have the most of the work to their credit when the road has been gone over.

"After every considerable fall of snow there appears a four-horse team drawing the most enormous roller that, I think, was ever built. It is made of plank and must be something like nine feet in diameter, with a heavy oak frame about it. The roller is long enough to make a road in which two teams can travel abreast, and where the snow is light, it packs it down very well indeed; but in hard snow, enormous though its weight is, it makes but little impression, because of its great extent of bearing surface.

"The cause of the formation of drifts is usually a roadside stone-wall a board fence, a clump of bushes, or some other obstruction to the free play of the wind, that could easily be removed. Many cross roads in my own State are every winter rendered nearly impassable for several months simply because of the obstructing nature of the fences, walls and bushes at the side of these roads. Let the bushes be cut and light wooden or wire fences substituted for those that now cause drifts, and there would be far less need of breaking roads constantly from the first of December to the last of March, as is the case in many localities."

How to Play With Fire.

Did you ever see a conjurer hold up a bit of white paper, touch a match to it, and have a tiny flame start in the center of the paper and wind around until it had drawn the outlines of an animal or spelled somebody's name, and then die out leaving the lines burnt in the paper as though they had been cut out? It probably seemed very wonderful to you, but it is easily done. Take some saltpetre and dissolve in water until the water will take up no more. Then with a wooden point, such as the sharpened end of a match, use this solution as an ink and write your name or draw a pattern on paper. Any paper will do but unsized paper will not show the ink when the liquid dries, which it will very soon do.

Now are you to know where to start from? Take a pencil mark at the spot. When your are ready apply to the mark [illegible] that is not

Not a Five Cent Dude.

Attracted by an offer to sell a 5 year old mare, who could trot in 2.30 for $100, a Marylander from Queen Anne's county, Ford's Store, P. O., came to this city Wednesday, says the Wilmington Republican.

The mare was shown and the Marylander was satisfied to take her at $100. He was to pay $50 down and have the animal 40 days on trial before paying the balance. The dealer promised to ship the horse by boat to Baltimore on the 3 o'clock boat the same afternoon.

The Marylander handed over $50 and then wanted the dealer to send the horse to the wharf. One pretext after another was given for delay, and when the dealer saw that the buyer was going to stay in town until he saw the horse safely on the boat he began to dibble over the thirty days' trial agreement.

Whereupon the buyer demanded back his money, but the dealer refused to hand it over. Believing that he was being victimized, the Marylander seized the dealer by the throat and threatened to smash his head if he did not refund the money. A friend started to the dealer's relief when the buyer placed his hand to his hip pocket commanded the friend to stand back. Addressing the dealer he said: "Put my money on that desk or I'll send a bullet through your head."

The money was placed on the desk.

"I have been put to useless expense coming up here. Now lay a $5 bill on top of the $50."

The dealer put up the money and the man from Maryland pocketed the $5, saying they couldn't play him for a five-cent dude.

Embarrassment and shyness frequently differ from each other. When a young man is embarrassed for money, his shyness doesn't stop him from trying to borrow money.

MARIE—"Mr. Quickly tells mamma that I'm an intellectual girl. I wonder what men mean when they call a girl intellectual?" Mamie—They mean they can't find it in conscience to call her pretty."

ROMANCE AND POLITICS.

Congressman Elect Miles Figures in a Bit of Eastern Shore Romance.

Congressman-elect Joshua Miles was in Washington a short time ago, straightening out an estate into which had crept a deal of romance.

It seems that two years ago a benevolent and kind-hearted citizen of Deal's Island, one stormy night, ran across a youth at the steam boat wharf without home or fortune. The lad was a bright little fellow and was taken to the home of his foster father and given a place in the family circle. Some time later the lad, then a boy of 12 years, began to talk about "some property that his grandfather had left him."

For a long time his remarks were treated as the idle fancy of a precocious youth, but after he insisted so upon having his "fortune" looked after his foster father took counsel of Mr. Miles, and had the boy tell his story to our Eastern Shore Solon. Mr. Miles, becoming impressed with the boy's sincerity, asked him if he knew who had the fortune in charge and although the fellow did not know the name of the attorney he insisted that if taken to Washington he could find his office, so Mr. Miles took him to the Capitol, where the boy led him to the office of a well-known attorney, who recognized the youth, whom he had lost sight of for several years, and after some disclosures to Mr. Miles, it was found the story was right. There had been left in trust for the youth several thousand dollars, among which were bonds of the new Croton Aqueduct to the amount of $1,000, bonds of the State of Louisiana and New York, besides some other holdings making altogether a snug little fortune. The boy's father was son of a rich New Yorker who disinherited his son for marrying against his wishes, but who remembered the grandson in his will. The lad's parents being dead he had started out in life a wanderer and finally anchored at Deal's Island on an oyster boat.

Mr. Miles has been made the legal guardian of the boy and will look after his education.

ONE of the lessons of life which many persons never learn is that it is not necessary to make an ass of one-self merely because one has a magnificent opportunity.

For Your Consideration.

To be happy you must be contented; to be contented you must feel that your home is secure, and your family provided for.

Have you a mortgage on your property? If you have you may be able to pay it off in time. If you die before it is lifted—who will pay it?

Would not a Life Insurance Policy be a good thing for you to carry, so that whatever happens your property will be secure?

Most men work hard and take but little present comfort in order to secure future wealth. Yet 95 per cent. of men in business are not successful. Think of it!

Do not leave this matter of the future welfare of your family in doubt. Decide now and take a $5,000, $10,000 or $20,000 policy on your life, payable to yourself at 60 or 65 years, if you are then living. If you die before that time your family and business are protected. If you live, you will be well provided for. Meanwhile you can enjoy your present income, and at the same time leave your family [illegible] paid your Life Insurance [illegible] spend the remainder of [illegible] fear of future [illegible] position for an [illegible] Life
