Amusing price cuts in Spring and Summer Goods. It isn't a surprising thing that our various lines this season are better in every way than they were last season. The surprising thing would be if they were not. Some merchants seem to think that when they reach a certain point in their stock it is well enough to stop. This is not my policy. I can truly state, I seem to be everlastingly pushed to bring better stock, more up-to-date in quality for less money than previous seasons.

The absolute certainty of satisfaction in Shoe value for the whole family. No old stock, everything new, fresh, up-to-date in style and quality in High and Low Shoes for the whole family. My exclusive lines are better in value than any previous seasons. You could actually save money by buying your footwear here.

All Summer Shoes and Low-Quarters Reduced.

Great Reductions in Men's, Boys' and Children's Suits.

A big reduction in the Clothing Department. Boys Suits in excellent assortment, straight pants and knickerbocker; separate trousers, all this season's make, full and medium peg, ranging in price, $1.00 to $4.50. My prices are much less than the same goods could be bought elsewhere.

DRY GOODS SALE.
 Just now we are offering some extraordinary good values. Everything in Dry Goods at low prices. New goods, perfect in quality, prices low.

Ladies' and Gents' Furnishings, ready-to-wear garments, as Cheap as the Material.

A BROKEN ENGAGEMENT.

The Romance That Kept Charles Villiers Single All His Life.

Charles Villiers, long the "father of the house of commons," never married. Together he lived a romance which is described in the "Reminiscences and Correspondence of Mme. Olga Norikoff" as having lasted all his life.

Villiers was once on the eve of marrying a very rich spinster. The lady, however, was imprudent enough one day to say to her fiancé that she knew very well he only wanted to marry her money and not herself.

Villiers' aristocratic dignity manifested itself. He took his hat, bowed to the lady and said that after that remark there could be no more question of marriage between them. Off he went.

Strangely enough, the deserted spinster spent the next thirty years in trying in vain to see him to make up. He never came near her or gave her a chance of coming near him. "And do you know," remarked Lady Gilbert, who told me the story, "she still loves him and cherishes his memory."

"Oh, that is charming! Quite a romance," I exclaimed. "Tell the lady to lunch with me tomorrow." To my acquaintance, "Charles Villiers is coming."

Lady Gilbert delivered my message. The two old people met at my hotel, after which the lady humbly asked Charles Villiers to call on her. He accepted the invitation. When we were alone together she said: "Do you know, Mme. Norikoff, he is not in the least altered after all these years. He is exactly the same in looks and manners."

"Of that, of course, I could have no opinion. But surely thirty years before the old Charles Villiers was neither half bent nor half blind. However, the old time friendship was renewed and lasted until the lady's death a few years later."

She left him the greatest part of her very great fortune. Charles Villiers became very rich in money, but unfortunately he was then very rich in years also.

STALKED BY VULTURES.

While a Man Trained a Buck the Birds Followed the Man.

"I met with a curious and not altogether pleasant experience," writes an Anglo-Indian correspondent who has done a good deal of large and small game shooting in India, "when I was one day stalking a black buck. Between me and my quarry lay a large flat field of black cotton soil bordered by a very low, straggling and thin growing hedge of small babul trees. My only way to get a shot was to cross this, keeping the bushiest tree between me and the buck, which had not much to browse on and was therefore seldom motionless. I proceeded to do the hundred yards on the flat of my stomach.

This on lower land baked black cotton soil was no joke. I pushed my rifle over my shoulder, and then, wriggling past it until the muzzle was near my knee, I would pass it on in front again, and so on.

"Progress was slow, and I was so absorbed that I failed to observe shadows crossing and recrossing my path and circling around me. Then the whirring of wings attracted my ears, and at most at the same moment a vulture landed on the ground not twenty yards away. I looked up. The air was alive with these repulsive looking birds. Then it flashed across me that I was being stalked! Doubtless these birds were attracted by my extraordinary method of procedure and mistook me for a wounded or dying man making a final effort to reach some shady spot. This was especially possible, as the experience occurred in a famine district where deaths by the wayside were not infrequent.
