Curious Baths In Penang.

One of the many things that strike the tourist as curious at Penang is the type of baths with which the hotels are provided. Penang is in the Straits Settlements, a British crown colony in the Malay peninsula, deriving its name from the straits of Malacca, which form the great trade route between India and China. From each of the first class rooms opens a dark, cement paved, damp smelling little room which serves as the bath. In it is an immense jar of porous brown earthenware about five feet high, nearly three feet in diameter in the middle and but one and a half feet in diameter at the top. It stands huge and graceful of outline, but dark and uninviting, and is full to the brim with water, not, however, to get into. Near it are a supply of soft soap and a long handled pump dipper. The proper procedure is to swell the body well, to throw several dippers of water over it, repeating the process until satisfied. There is water enough to keep it up for an hour or so, and there is a huge crash towel as large as a sheet to wrap up in when the bath is over.—Detroit News-Tribune.

Gamecocks In Panama. The color line is not very distinctly drawn in the Latin republics. The San Blas Indians are found in and around Panama. Like the Seminoles of Florida, they never were conquered. A curious feature of native life in Panama is the cockfighting, which, like baseball in the United States, is more attractive to the public than any other form of recreation. Even the workmen on the streets have favorite birds tethered near by and seize every opportunity to test their prowess. The click-click of steel spurs as the birds strike each other, the spurting of blood and the clamor of men indulging in small wagers seem to supply the mental excitement that Spaniards find in bullfights and that English speaking races derive from less brutal contests. The backer of each gamecock stands behind it, and if his bird shows signs of exhaustion he takes it up and puts its bill into his mouth while he inflates its exhausted lungs. One gamecock in a fight witnessed by the writer was killed dead, was thus revived, went back into the pit and finally killed its opponent.—National Magazine.

What is an Element? In his little book called "The Elements" Sir William A. Tilden defines an element as "a substance from which by the operation of ordinary chemical processes only one kind of matter can be obtained." This is something quite different from the four elements of Aristotle—fire, water, earth and air—or the salt, sulphur and mercury of the alchemists. Even in modern times the conception of what an element really is has changed somewhat. Sir William says: "Until quite recently the elements of the inorganic world were supposed to be fixed, immutable with the lapse of ages or under the mighty forces concerned in the making of worlds. But within a few years we have learned that the atoms at least are continually crumbling away. It is impossible to say whether all may not be suffering a slow waste which in the long run may lead back to the primal chaos."

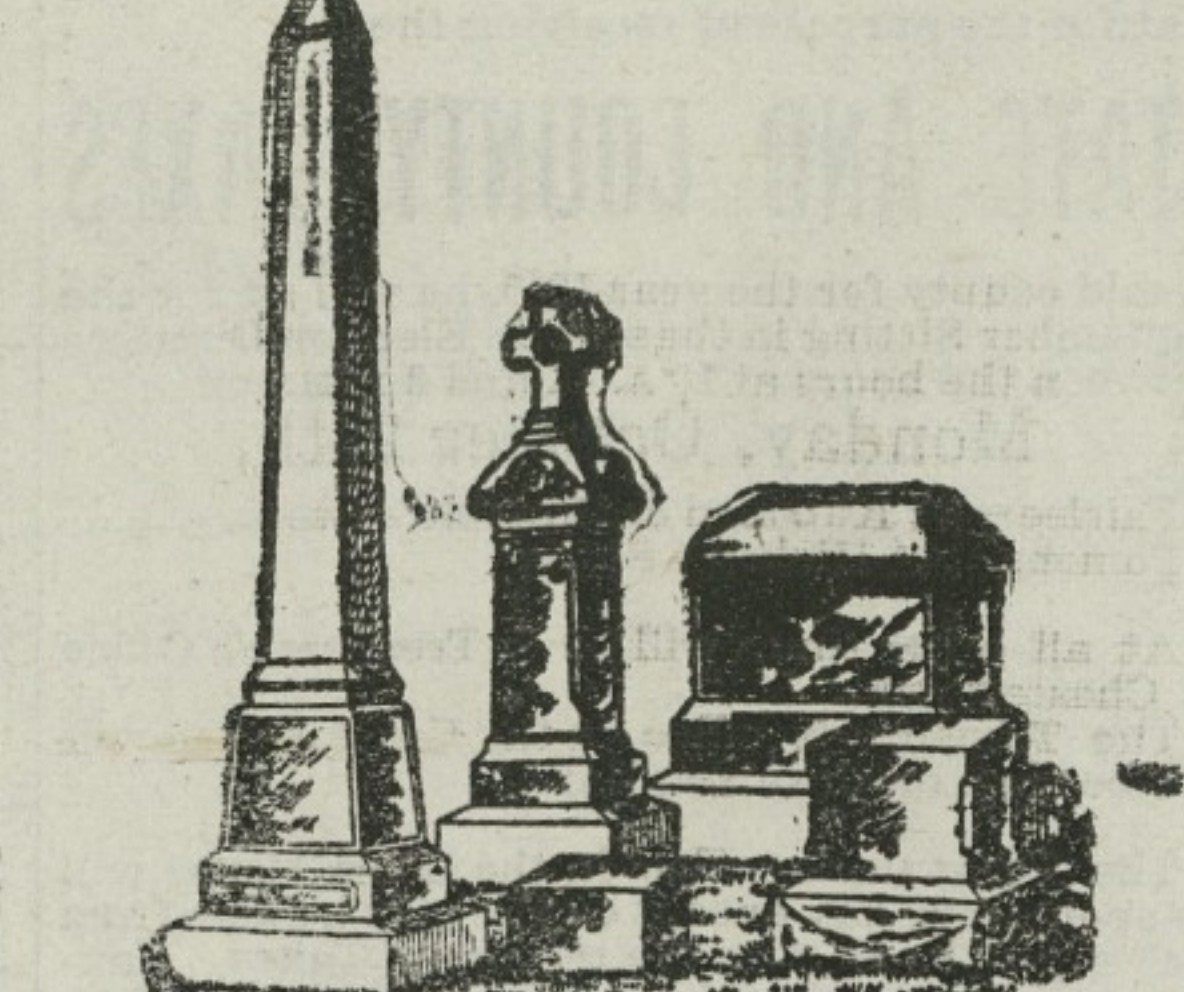

When the Plague Raged. Sir Walter Besant in one of his books says of the author of "Robinson Crusoe" and "Journal of the Plague": "De Foe was born in the year 1661. His father lived in Cripplegate, where, as we know, he had a shop. The child, therefore, was four years of age in the plague year. A child of four observes a great deal and may remember a great deal. De Foe says: 'When he was brought a joint of meat he would not take it out of the butcher's hand, but took it off the hooks himself. On the other hand, the butcher would not touch the money, but put it into a 'pot full of vinegar which he kept for the purpose.' This must surely have been seen by the child and remembered, it happened in his father's shop before his eyes."

Rock Hall Items.

A party from Rock Hall while out canoeing last Saturday down the Bay shore about four miles, between Smith's and Parson's, ran into a school of large rock fish. The school reached down the shore at least half a mile. If one of Rock Hall's fishermen had been down there with a haul seine he would have caught a bunch of fish that would readily have brought a thousand dollars. This is the time of the year for fish to school and a good watch should be kept of the flats by the local fishermen.

Miss Mamie Wilkins visited Baltimore this week. Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Maslin entertained at their home last Tuesday evening a large party of friends. Music was the program of the evening. Refreshments were served at 10.45. The reception was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Maslin's tenth marriage anniversary.

Thomas E. Joiner has started the construction of a thirty-five foot raised deck cruiser—a one-man control boat—which he will use in connection with his business. We are glad to note that the Junior's new hall will be lighted with the F. F. Gas Co.'s lamps. This is a very brilliant and practical light and will prove an attraction to the new building.

Max Alexander has one of the greatest trade attracting schemes on record. You can furnish an entire kitchen with articles given away with each purchase. Ask Max about it. Mr. Urie, of Urie's Pool Room, has installed a box ball alley that is drawing the crowd. While Thompson had his bowling alleys the boys learned to bowl—now they have become expert also at box ball.

Don't forget the festival of the M. E. Church tonight, which will be held in the new hall. Rev. C. E. McCollough, D. D., gave a very interesting address at Wesley Chapel last Thursday night. The subject was: In His Steps, or What Would You Do? Also a selection of finely chosen illustrated hymns, Rock of Ages, The Holy City, Ninety and Nine and others. Dr. McCollough is an able speaker and the audience thoroughly enjoyed the lecture.
