WAGES ON THE FARM.

Higher During 1910 Than at Any Time in the Last 45 Years.

Higher wages were paid to American farm laborers during 1910 than at any time in the last 45 years, according to statistics just made public by the Department of Agriculture. The average wage for the country during 1910 was $27.50 per month, while 20 years ago it was only $18.33. With board the average wage was $19.21.

In some parts of the country the rate of wages of farm laborers was higher than in others. The highest was in Nevada, where the rate was $54 per month, while in Montana and Washington it was $50. South Carolina paid the lowest rate, $16.50. In the New England and North Atlantic States the average was $33.19, with Massachusetts paying the highest, $37.20. With board the average was $21.65. In the South Atlantic States the average was $19.75, with West Virginia paying the highest, $29. With board the average was $13.77. In the Northern Central States east of the Mississipi the average was $31.81, with Wisconsin paying highest, $37.25. With board the average was $22.94. In the Northern Central States west of the Mississipi the average was $35.45 with North Dakota paying the highest, $42. With board the average was $25.10. In the Southern Central States the average was $21.90, with Oklahoma paying the highest, $28.10. With board the average was $15.28.

Irrigation For Maryland.

The average rainfall in Maryland is abundant for the making of all farm crops if only the natural sprinkling system could be so controlled that the water from the clouds would be delivered at just the right times and in just the proper quantities. There is rarely a year, however, in which the farming industries of the State do not suffer from drouth during some period of the growing season. The drouth of the present year, coming before the middle of April and extending through May, affected the grass, the wheat, the early vegetable crops and the fruits. A competent observer from one of the Eastern Shore counties estimate the damage in that section of the State at $1,000,000 and this is undoubtedly a conservative estimate. The drouth damage over entire State will probably exceed $3,000,000.

In the semi-arid regions of the far West, where the rainfall is too slight for agricultural purposes, they are damming the streams and turning on water as needed. Notwithstanding the fact that the water cost for irrigation purposes is often as much as $30 per acre annually, the irrigated farms are valued at from $100 to $300 per acre. Surely there ought to be a valuable suggestiveness in the extraordinary satisfactory results that are obtained from these artificially watered Western farm lands.

There is no Western state that has such an abundant water supply avaiable for irrigation purposes, as Maryland. A Baltimore engineer, who has knowledge of irrigation engineering acquired through practical experience in the West, declares in a statement made through The American that irrigation could be provided in the Eastern section of this state at one-eighth the cost in the far West. There is an enormous amount of water that goes to waste in every Maryland county that might be turned te profitable use. If only a few progressive farmers would dam a stream coursing through their lands and show what might be done in the way of obtaining a sure and regulated water supply, the object lesson would be most valuable.—American.

HEAVY RAINFALL.

Much More Water Has Fallen This Year Than Last So Far.

Records kept at the Department of Engineering and Surveying show the rain fall so far last month to be 9.75 inches.

The total rainfall, includ ing melted snow during 1910 was 37.37 inches, and the total rainfall for this year up to the present is 36.37 inches. The following table shows the amount of rainfall for each month of 1910 and 1911 up to the present time:

	1911.	1910.
January	3.53	2.49
February	1.85	.30
March	1.13	.10
April	2.36	3.38
May	3.14	1.93
June	7.51	6.77
July	3.37	5.42
August	9.73	4.79

These figures include the rainfall up to last night.
