SCHOFIELD'S CASH STORE,

STILL POND, MARYLAND.

WELL! WELL!

Christmas is Here Again.

DEAR FRIENDS—Another year has slipped by and Christmas is almost here—just two weeks time for prepartion, and believe me, I'll be busy every minute. It seems that I'm being more gladly welcomed than ever before, and this will surely be my busiest Christmas. I am holding informal receptions daily at Schofield's, and it's delightful to see the many happy faces. The grown ups are just as glad to see me as are the children. There's a beautiful something that creeps into their hearts about this time—the desire to make other people happy, and its no longer a secret that there's no surer way to make ourselves happy. I never saw a more general disposition on the part of men and women to help me. My Still Pond headquarters will be at Schofield's until Christmas because I regard this as the brightest and best Christmas gift store in the town.

Sincerely yours,

SANTA CLAUS.

Every Saturday will be Children's Day at Schofield's. Santa Claus will be here from 1 to 5. Let all the children come and receive a treat from Old Santa Claus.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

A new departure in railroad industrial work is furnished by the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic and the Maryland, Delaware & Virginia Railways, which have just issued a directory of shippers of oysters located on their lines.

Chesapeake Bay oysters have long been famous throughout the United States, and the oyster industry in this region has grown so rapidly of late under stimulus from transportation companies eager to increase their freight revenue from this source, that few realize its present magnitude.

The directory contains the names of 344 shippers of oysters located in 131 towns. Chrisfield, Maryland, furnishes the greatest number, and in this town alone there are 31 individuals and firms that ship oysters.

The celebrated Chincoteague oysters come from the neighborhood of Franklin City, Virginia. An idea of the extent of the traffic can be had from the fact that last winter the Maryland, Delaware & Virginia Railway, the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railway, and the Delaware Railroad hauled 209,793 barrels of shell, and 89,000 packets of shucked oysters and clams from this section.
