HELEN ADAIR'S NEW YORK FASHION BUDGET

Picture Fashions in Vogue—Artistic Marie Antionette Silk—The Princess Gown a Snare for Her Whose Figure is Not Lissome.

Portraits of old-time beauties are being studied as never before for the secret of their charms, and many of the models sent over by the best French makers this season owe all their grace of line and combination of color to court beauties long since gone to dust, and of all the modes we have adapted Marie Antionette is the leading "picture fashion."

Marie Antionette silk, which was so enthusiastically chosen by Miss Alice Roosevelt for an important place in her trousseau and which is having such an unprecedented vogue, owes much of its great appreciation by our modern modistes to their growing understanding of the truly artistic in fabrics. Marie Antionette is unquestionably the most artistic production of to-day, and, as is rarely the case with novelties, bids fair to be the favorite silk of to-morrow as well, and of all the silks that are selling in such profusion at the Nothing but Silk Shop, in Twenty-second street, not one, they tell me, is selling in such quantities as this latest product of the silk loom, and some of the most fetching shades this popular shop is selling profusely are the tender gray, pastel green, Alice blue and American beauty rose—the latter shade being exceedingly popular this season when color seems to be running riot.

Of course a good many white gowns are worn, but the day of the "white season" is past.

Cut is everything in this age of artistic and luxurious modes, and the Princess gown was never more popular. Many of the handsomest toilets are of its type, but the fit—by the way—of such garment must be perfect to escape being an eyesore. But let milady of over full figure beware of the snare of the Princess—for it is not for her unless her lines are perfect.

Side by side with the Princess dress we see the flounced dress which was such a feature of 1840 to 1870.

Skirts are very full at the hem and all that have any pretentions to dressiness dip into a slight train at the back. The skirts are very long at front and back.

There never was a time when the sleeve played such an important part in woman's dress as today. As to the length of the fashionable sleeve, it is short, of course. But short is a relative term. Women who go for stunning appearances have their sleeves off above the elbow, but sleeves ending half way between the wrist and elbow are choice of the most conservatively dressed women—who are largely in majority.

In cut they follow more the shape of the arm than they did and are consequently more becoming. The sloping shoulder effect is decidely passe, and the sleeve is now so cut and placed that the shoulders appear much wider than last season.

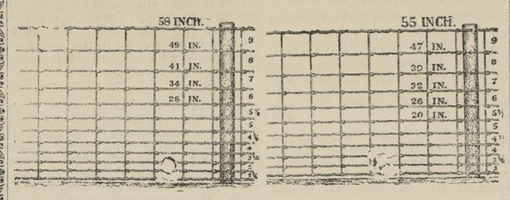

HELEN ADAIR.

Fire at Church Hill.—The stables and cow sheds, together with about 20 tons of hay and between two and three thousand bundles of blades, the long fodder and straw ricks on the farm of Mr. W. Charles Palmatory, near Church Hill, were totally destroyed by fire Sunday noon at 12.30 o'clock. The family had only a few minutes returned from church and were at dinner, when one of the colored boys were ordered to turn out the cows and upon going to the barn fire was discovered in the rear of the cow shed. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been from a pipe, as one of the hands was seen striking a match to his pipe just before going to dinner. Mr. Palmantory's loss on hay, fodder, etc., will amount to about $500, the building having been insured in the Kent Mutal Insurance Co.
