PUT NEW LIFE IN YOUR OLD TREES

A Crop Worth Living From the Neglected Orchard For the Asking. Surprising.

HERMAN BECKENSTRATER.
Maryland Agricultural College.

Seven hundred barrels of apples from a ten-acre orchard, netting between two and three thousand dollars is not bad farming. Yet this is what the Hanson Brothers, of Ellicott City, secured the past season from an old orchard that six years ago was practically worthless. What they have accomplished can be repeated to advantage with many of our neglected orchards.

The first step in bringing into usefulness an old orchard is a thorough cleaning up. Most old orchards have not been well pruned, as is shown by decaying branches, tops that are too thick and high, and a great growth of water sprouts. Thin out the top to admit light and air and increase the vigor of the tree. Scrape off the loose, shaggy bark which harbors insects, using a short-handled hoe. With a sharp knife remove in the winter or early spring, all signs of canker, body blight, or dead spots. Head back close and paint the wound to prevent loss from evaporation. This will also make spraying and picking easier. A thorough spraying with lime sulfur solution in the late fall and then again in the early spring is desirable.

BROUGHT TO LIFE.

Old orchards are usually in sod. Nothing will renew their life more effectively than breaking up this sod and cultivation for a number of years. Before plowing fertilizer should be applied. Stable manure is very desirable, but if not to be had in sufficient quantity, 500 pounds per acre of fertilizer may be used. A good mixture to use is 125 pounds nitrate of soda, 100 pounds ammonium sulfate, 700 pounds acid phosphate, 180 pounds muriate of potash, and 900 pounds of kainit. These substances should be thoroughly mixed before using.

Apply the fertilizer early in the spring and plow it under. Cultivate your land after every rain, as soon as it is in workable condition. Early in August sow to the acre 30 pounds of crimson clover or 1½ bushels of cow peas. Plow them under the spring following. This will improve your orchard. For further information, write for Maryland Experiment Station Bulletin No. 178.

YOUR APPLES SAVED BY WINTER SPRAYING

Kills San Jose Scale and Insures First-Class Marketable Fruit.

T. B. SYMONS.
Entomologist, Maryland Agricultural College.

Fruit growers should now be planning for early spring spraying for the San Jose scale. All fruit trees should be sprayed with lime sulphur solution. The formula is as follows:

Best stone lime..... 50 lbs.
Sulfur 98% pure..... 100 lbs.
Water ..... 50 gallons

This solution may be obtained from dealers or be home-made. Full directions for mixing together with a Spray Calendar will be gladly furnished on application to the Maryland Experiment Station.

No matter how good the solution may be, if the spraying is not done thoroughly the results will be disappointing. All parts of the tree should be hit with the spray; especially the ends of the branches, as the insects always seek the new and tender wood. Good spraying cannot be done unless you have good apparatus in the form of a pump, nozzles, hose, etc. Where there is much spraying, a good power sprayer should be secured. Small orchards can be treated with a double acting or barrel pump.
