"The Best Possible Newspaper!"

What sort of a paper is it? In the first place, it must be a Home Paper—the Woman's Friend and a part of her daily life. And it must be a NECESSITY to the Business Man. It must not only tell what is happening in the world, but it must go farther and tell WHY it is happening AND WHAT IT MEANS.

The Best Possible Newspaper has a staff of correspondents covering the world field of the Associated and United Press, scouring the earth for vital human facts. It has fashions and art, books and music, literature and politics at its right hand. It has the markets for the farmer, the merchant, the broker.

The world has never seen an age of greater constructive significance in politics, in science, in society. Every move in the field of action is a topic for discussion in cities, villages, hamlets, at cross-roads. And the Best Possible Newspaper must equip its readers for intelligent understanding of all these things.

That is precisely why it is the simple truth that for your purposes, and for the purpose of the whole South, THE BEST POSSIBLE NEWSPAPER IS

MIX MAPS AND MEALS.

An Easy Way of Studying Geography While You Eat.

In the dining room of one family there hang two large colored maps, one of the world, the other of the state in which they live.

The parents and children are forming the habit of talking during meals about what they read or hear, of places and events outside the visible horizon. And whenever any unfamiliar place is mentioned one of the children immediately leaves the table long enough to locate it on the map. "It is near such and such a town or river or mountain," "That is where so and so lives," or "Such a thing happened there," is the information usually added to the first statement.

They do not limit their conversation to bookish things, but speak naturally about whatever they are interested in, turning to the maps as one looks at a railroad guide when traveling, to place themselves. In this way bits of knowledge are linked together, and as sight knowledge requires so much less mental effort than ear knowledge it is more fun.

Besides, the maps, hanging low and in a good light, make a splendid rainy day game for the two younger children, aged eight and ten. The mother, sitting near with her sewing, gives them "hard ones to find" (names of more or less obscurity), and they keep score as to which gets the most "firsts," calling twenty the game.

No wonder the whole world seems like one big picture to this family, and geography but a play.—Woman's Home Companion.

LEAPING FOR THE FIRE NET.

Safe Jumps of Eight or Nine Stories Have Been Made.

At a recent Fifty-sixth street tenement fire in New York that resulted in more of a smoke alarm than a blaze a man and his wife were seen to get out on the ledge of a fifth story window. The firemen told them to wait a moment, that there might be no need to jump. The man cried that they were suffocating and must jump.

The firemen stretched the net and shouted for them to poise themselves properly and jump one at a time. But even while the firemen were shouting the instructions the couple kissed each other, locked arms and leaped. They came down straight and sure as a plummet right into the net. They rebounded about fifteen feet and fell in the net again in a sitting posture, still embraced.

The firemen let them gently down to the sidewalk. They still sat there looking at each other incredulously. Then they were told there was not even a good fire to justify their jump. It had all been smoke from a smouldering lot of rags and other rubbish. The man and wife heard the news with expressions of wonder, thankfulness and condemnation of their silliness.

Jumps of eight and nine stories without injuries have been recorded. The makeup of the jumper is what counts. The firemen have to be prepared for all kinds. Sometimes they have to shift a few inches quickly because of the bad judgment of distance shown by the jumper. But in most cases the leap to the net saves life.—New York Sun.

A Little Paint Badly Applied.

The play "L'Homme de Destin" was taken from the stage when its triumph was at the zenith. One evening Napoleon, accompanied by his friend Duroc, went in disguise to the Porte St. Martin theater, where the piece was being performed, Eugene Chevalier appearing as the man of destiny. They bought a box, but had hardly entered it when the emperor broke forth in violent execrations against the "fool managers." It seemed that the decorators had left in the box pots of oil and paint, and into these the emperor had stepped. Wild with rage, he rushed from the house and to make matters worse was recognized in the lobby. No paper mentioned the incident, but by order of the emperor the play was never produced again, and Chevalier never appeared again as the man of destiny—and all on account of a little paint badly applied.

Theory and Practice.

Little Beatrice was taking piano lessons and learning at the same time something of theory. Like many other children, she disliked practicing her finger exercises. One day her mother, who was working in an upstairs room, noticed a sudden lull in the playing. She looked down and saw Beatrice sitting perfectly motionless.

"Beatrice, why don't you practice?" she called down sharply.

"I am practicing, mother," replied the child with perfect self assurance. "I'm practicing my theory." — New York Post.

Parliament and Congress.

The British parliament and the United States congress have many points of difference. The parliament is practically omnipotent, while the congress is subject not only to the provisions of the constitution, but to the president's veto. Congress represents the people, while parliament to all intents and purposes is the people.—New York American.

Thoughtless.

"I offered Chollie a penny for his thoughts."

"Did you get them?"

"No, he was out of thoughts as usual."—Boston Transcript.
