DAUGHTERS OF WHITE HOUSE DO THEIR BIT

Prominent in Red Cross and Other War Work.

HELPS OUT ON WAR LOANS

Mrs. McAdoo, Daughter of President Wilson, Talks to Women's Organizations All Over the Country--Daughters of Cleveland, Roosevelt, Taft and Harrison Doing Great Service.

Washington.—What the women of the various nations have done in the war is one of the marvels of the great conflict. English women, who, before the war, were the civilized nations turned civilized Europe into a charnel house, found outlets for their energy in hurling bricks at the homes of the ministers in Downing street and holding disorderly gatherings before the houses of parliament, have organized home defense battalions, raised money for the Red Cross, and have donned the white uniforms of mercy and braved the dangers of the battle front.

Russian women, who before the czar hurled his defy at the kaiser, were either the carefully guarded wives and daughters of Muscovite nobles or the hard-slaving victims of vodka-soaked moujiks, donned the uniforms of the Russian soldiers and entered the "Battalions of Death," where noblewomen fought and died beside the woman descendants of the serfs. And the same is true in a more or less degree of every nation in the world.

American women have not hesitated to come forward and "do their bit" since Uncle Sam cast in his lot with the allies. True, American women have not organized "Battalions of Death," but they haven't had to, and never will have to, for American men will never run away from the enemy. If any such thing could possibly take place none of us doubt but that American women would promptly put such cowardly men to shame, as did the woman soldiers of Russia.

Wilson's Daughters Help.

On the battle lines of France, however, American women have already undergone their baptisms of fire. In the Red Cross hospitals and automobile and field ambulance services many American women are at work, and have been at work for some time. Many American women have driven ambulances in France, facing the daily danger of instant death to pilot areas to the front to bring back to the field hospitals the heroic French and English wounded.

Among the more prominent of American women who are "doing their bit" are the "Daughters of the White House." Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, has thrown herself wholeheartedly into aid of the Red Cross. Miss Wilson has appeared at many entertainments, where she has sung, the proceeds going for the benefit of our soldiers and sailors who will soon be in contact with the enemy.

Mrs. William G. McAdoo, wife of the secretary of the treasury, and another of the daughters of President Wilson, has been a prime mover in the work of interesting the women of the country in war loans. Mrs. McAdoo traveled all over the United States addressing women's organizations, and carried on an extensive campaign in behalf of the Liberty Loan. Mrs. McAdoo organized and became the head of the Woman's Liberty Loan committee and brought women's organizations in all parts of the United States into line.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, wife of the former congressman and daughter of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, was not to be left behind in the patriotic movement of women. How could a daughter of "The Colonel" be backward when the United States is at war? Mrs. Longworth, who, when she was Miss Alice Roosevelt, had the distinction of receiving a proposal of marriage from the much-married sultan of Zulu, turned her home in Cincinnati over to the Red Cross for war work.

Other White House Daughters. Miss Elizabeth Harrison, daughter of the late President Benjamin Harrison, donned khaki and instructed her associates at the New York College of Law in military drill and food conservation. Miss Harrison did not organize a "Battalion of Death," but what she did organize corresponded to the English battalions of women for home defense. Miss Harrison was most active in spreading the movement for the conservation of food throughout the country. If Food Dictator Hoover is to be believed, the conservation of food is quite as important in the plan to beat the kaiser as the manufacture of shot and shell.

Miss Margaret Wilson.

Miss Helen Taft, dean of Bryn Mawr college and daughter of the former president, got out in the soil with a broad-brimmed straw hat and taught the girls at the college how to garden and conserve food. Miss Taft instituted a complete course in gardening and food conservation.

Miss Esther Cleveland, daughter of the late Grover Cleveland, is doing a work of particular mercy in France. She is teaching blind French soldiers how to read. Miss Cleveland has written of some of the most pitiable cases. Later, when American men go into battle and come into contact with liquid fire and poisonous gases, Miss Cleveland will turn her attention to such of them as are unfortunate enough to lose their eyesight. In the meantime she is caring for the unfortunates of our allies.

FALSE LEGS FOR HORSES

With Them They Can Do Light Work on a Farm.

A new invention of artificial legs for horses and dogs was offered to the Philadelphia branch of the Red Star Animal Relief by a French-American veterinarian who refuses to disclose his name.

This man, who, since the war started, has taken 21 trips to Europe with horses for France, claims that although the horse or mule will no longer be good for active service, it may be used for light farm work if these legs are used.

The leg, or crutch, which has been used successfully in this country, is made of steel, with a special quadrant spring imitating the vertical and lateral flexings of the ankle and fetlock. By means of this many crippled horses and mules, which would otherwise be killed, will be given a chance to live.

Bank Gives Children Money.

It is not often a bank gives away money, but that is just what the Third National bank of Atlanta did recently. This bank, which has a large number of children's accounts, having provided a special window for them in its savings department, saw that every baby born in Atlanta in the week of August 23-29, inclusive, has a savings bank account of its own. In other words, the bank presented each child born in this period with a savings donation of $1 set down in a savings bank book.
