A UNITED DEMOCRACY

Harmony, the Merit System and Economy Leading Planks in the Democratic Platform

At the Democratic Convention, which met in Baltimore on Thursday, a strong platform was adopted, and a united Democracy was assured.

Formal ratification of the nominations for state offices and the re-election of State Chairman J. Hubert Wade were the other business of the convention. The nominating and seconding speeches evoked frequent applause, as did the candidates' speeches of acceptance. Contrary to the old custom of having formal notifications subsequent to the convention, the four state candidates were presented to the convention immediately after their nominations had been ratified.

The candidates are

For Governor—Ablert C. Ritchie, of Baltimore City.

For Comptroller—Maj. E. Brooke Lee, of Montgomery County.

For Attorney-General, Thomas J. Keating, of Queen Annes county.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals—Caleb C. Magruder, of Prince George's County.

Comptroller Hugh A. McMullen, of Cumberland, was chairman of the convention, and made a ringing speech, in opening the proceedings. John Mays Little, of Baltimore county, and J. Watson Webb, of Dorchester county, were the secretaries. The convention was attended by as representative a body of county men as in the history of the Democratic party, leaders and workers of all elements being on hand and fraternizing in the friendliest spirit. Their attitude was a marked contrast to the conventions of 1911 and 1915, and some of the ones of preceding years. City people were fewer in numbers.

Senator John Walter Smith and former Senator Blair Lee, for years the two big opposing figures in the counties, were on hand throughout the day, and Mr. Lee made a speech seconding the nomination of Mr. Ritchie. He and Senator Smith met in the lobby of the theatre, just after the convention was called to order, and exchanged greetings cordially. Gov. Harrington also was present and much interested in the proceedings. Former Gov. Frank Brown, who used to prefer being regarded as a Carrol county man, mingled with the crowd for a time, and former Gov. Edwin Warfield, who has not attended many party gatherings in late years, entered after the convention had been under way some time and took a seat among the delegates. He was given a cheer when he walked down the aisle.

The same spirit of good feeling which prevailed between the state figures was shown in many cases among prominent county men. James J. Archer and T. H. Robinson, of Harford, both former State Senators, who consistently have been lined upon on opposing sides, were delegates from their county and sat side by side throughout the proceedings and enjoyed each other's company. Similar good feeling was shown by men belonging to the Lee and Peter factions in Montgomery and by men from Frederick and other counties where heavy fighting and sharp antagonisms have been customary.
