Ducks That Fly 120 Miles An Hour

If a bluebill duck is traveling at its best, it can, good hunters declare, wing off its mile and a half a minute with ease. That seems incredible, but a canvasback duck would leave the bluebill away behind.

Hunters have held their watches on about every kind of wild fowl that exists, and as nearly as many of them can calculate from the record a race between a canvasback, a blue or a green teal and a broadbill duck would very nearly approximate a dead heat, the chances being a trifle, perhaps against the broadbill, which would make, say, its 110 miles an hour to the canvasback's 120 and the teal's 115.

Some who have timed wild fowl hold that either of the teals can lead the canvasback in speed, but most tests go to show that as a rule the canvasback can distance the whole wild fowl family if it lays itself out to do it. When the canvasback is taking things easy it jogs along at the rate of eighty miles an hour. If it has business somewhere and must get there in a hurry it can put its two miles behind every minute and do this easily all day long if necesasry.

If one has any doubt as to the swiftness of the canvasback on the wing when business calls all he has to do is to fire at the leader in a string some time when he has the chance. Duck shot when propelled by the proper quantity of powder travels pretty fast itself, but if one's charge brings down any member of that string of ducks it will be the fifth or sixth bird back of the leader.

If one would have a chance of dropping the leader he will have to aim not less than ten feet ahead of him. Then he will more than likely run plumb against the shot. When he drops it will be a quarter of a mile or so farther on, for the duck cannot stop short of that distance.

On the other hand, it has been found that the mallard duck is lazy, as wild duck activity on the wing goes. He seldom cares to cover more than a mile a minute, but he can if he wants to, for he has been timed when he was "hitting the wind" at a good seventy-five-mile clip. The mallard's every-day style of traveling is about fifty miles an hour. The black duck can show about the same speed as the mallard.

The wild goose's performances on the wing are astonishing. It has a big, heavy body to carry, and to see one of these fowl waddling on the ground one would never suppose that it could get away very fast on the wing. But the way it manages to glide from one feeding place to another on occasion has a suddenness that is aggravating to the best of wing shots.

To see a flock of honkers moving along so high that they seem to be sweeping the cobwebs of the sky, one would not be inclined to assert that they were proceeding at the rate of from 90 to 100 miles an hour, but that is just what they are doing, since the wild goose never fools away any time. He always has a business gait.

But consider the flight of the squealer duck! One will not be apt to see a squealer duck unless he goes down into the oak and pecan deadenings of Arkansas, for this duck does not seem to flock where other wild fowl are found in large numbers. In fact, most hunters say, it is not known whether it flocks or not, for one never sees more than two or three of them together. It goes a mile and a half a minute.

Epidemic Has Not Returned To Kent

The much heralded epidemic of influenza has not returned to Kent Co. or the country, we are glad to state, although it had been heralded broadcast that it would make its appearance again in October. A year ago and Kent county and the whole Eastern Shore was plunged in sorrow, for last month marks the anniversary of the influenza epidemic. During that horrible epidemic some of the flower of the youth in this community were stricken and their absence from the community has been deeply missed. Conditions were so bad a year ago that people walked the streets in silence, and talked to each other in hushed voices. The epidemic came like a thief in the night, and after doing its deadly work it disappeared suddenly. Our people have much to rejoice over, that up to the present time no return of this malady has occurred.

Do You "Live" With Your Family?

The Youth's Companion is published for those families who purpose to live together, work together, play together and read together. The editors believe that a united family means a united nation.

It is surprising how many stories—over 250—are printed in the 52 weekly issues. Every member of the family will enjoy reading Charles B. Hawes' serial, The Son of a 'Gentleman Born,' in 10 chapters, beginning in an early issue, and the 8 other serial stories by Elsie Singmaster and others.

New subscribers for 1920 will receive:

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues in 1920.
2. All remaining weekly 1919 issues.
3. The Companion Home Calendar for 1920.

All the above for $2.50.

4. McCall's Magazine for 1920, $1—the monthly fashion authority. Both publications for only $2.95.

Pomona Grange

Kent County was royally entertained by Galena Grange Saturday. One of the most enthusiastic meetings ever held in Kent was held. The old-time dinner, the old-time crowd, with their old-time "pep" were present. The chief business consisted of arrangements for State Grange in Chestertown Dec. 9, 10, 11. Kent wants to make it the best state meeting ever held. That means every granger and all the people of Chestertown must do lots of personal work for the thing to go, which we know will happen. Subordinate granges, attend to your dues and work, work from now on. A county exhibit in charge of our most efficient county agents, Miss Hill and Mr. Derrick, will take place at the same time. A committee was appointed to investigate the feasibility of buying a moving picture machine to be used in schools and places by our agents. Lecture hours, most hourly talks by Miss Hill, Mr. Derrick and Miss Rogers, our Health Nurse, and paper of spicy news of grangers by Mrs. Hannah Moore. Am writing these items from Hagerstown Court House and we will have to hustle to equal the hospitality these people are extending to us. More grange news next week.
