Farmers, List Your Repair Needs

It would be hard to find a farmer who at some time or another had not lost valuable time waiting for necessary repair parts. Take this territory and total up the time lost in this way and it will astonish you. And all because repairs are not odered as early as they should be.

There is no better time than right now—just before the busiest season on the farm—to go over your machines carefully, make a list of repairs you are likely to need and send it to us. With this list in our hands, we can order our stock so as to be prepared to meet every call promptly.

Repair part service is a necessary part of our business. We realize what it means to you in time and money to get what you need at once. Help us to help you by making up your list now and sending it in to us.

POULTRY

CARRYING FOR THE YOUNG BIRDS AND ENCOURAGING THEM TO BE BIG, LUSTY, HEALTHY GROWN STOCK

The other day, in a spirit of fun, no doubt, a party told the writer of a local chicken raiser who, after putting his chicks under the brooder had put a cot in the chicken house in order that the chicks might get the proper treatment and care for the first three weeks or so. To the one who told this chicken story it appeared a big joke, but it contains a big lesson to our minds. The man who will sleep with his young chicks for the first few weeks, in nine cases out of ten will rear them and make a success of the business, because it means that the chicks will get the care and the attention so essential to success in rearing them. You can hatch out good chicks, and brood them under the most perfect brooder, but if they don't get the care and attention necessary to success you will make a failure. And so we say that the local man who put his cot in his brooder house in order that he might be with his chicks did not only a laudable thing, but a practical thing, and many of our local chicken raisers, far too lax in their efforts, can take a pretty good lesson from his plan.

Not long ago the writer was asked what was a good percentage for hatching with incubator. Hatching with incubator or with hens depends a great deal upon the eggs you have and the stock from which they came. Around 60 to 65 per cent of all the eggs put in the incubator is a good hatch.

A good many people are hoodwinked into buying eggs, at big prices from hens that laid 300 eggs in one year. In a great many instances this is a fake proposition and will result in but one thing, and that is in the purchaser paying for something that he does not get. How many of the 300 records claimed by breeders were made in national or reliable laying contests? How many of these breeders have pens entered in national or other contests this season? In fact, we wonder how many 300-egg hens there are anyhow that are absolutely known to have produced this phenomenal number of eggs in a single year. To produce a 300-egg hen you have accomplished something and should be paid for the eggs she produces, but to deliberately fraud the public, making them believe you have such pens and charging exorbitant prices for them, a person puts himself in a class with the lowest of thieves. In aiming to produce the super egg machine, the practical poultryman is obliged to consider several important factors. First, he seeks to produce a good looking pullet that is near the standard in weight. She must have the stamina to stand up under the strain of rapid laying and still put enough bodily reserve strength at the end of the pullet year so she may reproduce herself in numerous sons and daughters. It is not enough that she has laid many eggs. The quality must be there in point of fertility, size, shape, color and shell texture. She is a hen easily worth her weight in silver and perhaps in gold.

The warm weather of the past week will bring out the mites and lice in a few weeks and everything should be done to break them up as soon, or before, they appear. Death and disease are often attributed to lice infestation when in reality the presence of the parasites is due primarily to the weakened condition of the fowls, brought about by disease which in a measure prevents them from properly protecting themselves against vermin. Like the mites, lice multiply rapidly in the warm weather, but, unlike the mites, they live constantly on their hosts, and do not feed on the blood of the fowl. If one keeps his houses clean, painting them inside with a strong solution of Carbolineum, he will not be bothered either with mites or lice.

There is a kind of poultry culling that can be done with the eye, in watching the flock eat, if the poultry-keeper has trained himself really to observe the fowls and their needs. We seldom look at any flock, such as seen upon the average Kent County farm, that we do not notice many undesirable fowls, two of the most important of which are the indolent, lazy fowls, that are merely boarders, and the wild, shy ones that are not only boarders but a nuisance as well. They keep to the edge of the flock ready to create a stir at any time and upset the balance of the birds. Both of these kinds of birds should be caught and marketed. They are good for nothing else. Then you see the one that does not eat, perfering to stay upon the edge of the flock. I have heard persons say they do this because they are not hungry; they do it because they are sick in some way, very likely intestines tied up, egg bag bursted or some inward trouble. They will not live long and might as well be gotten rid of the moment they are noticed not to be eating. I have been astonished to see how many hens of this type are allowed to roam about the yards and endanger, perhaps, the entire flock.
