DEATHS

Death, who knocks with equal and persistent force both at the door of the peasant and the prince, has been busy with his appointed task, and two of our oldest and best citizens have sailed out into the unknown sea from which no voyager ever returns. They were both good men, good friends and stalwart, earnest Christians. They both added to earth's joys. We seem to be clinging to a tree that is fast becoming bare in the autumn gale, as our dear friends leave us one by one. Soon there will be a "last leaf," and then—As I face the "sunset and the evening star," I find myself hoping that I may be permitted to do something of worth before the end. As one looks back over the past there seems to be so very little to be proud of; the mountain peaks of successful endeavor are tremendously misty, if, indeed, there are any peaks at all to be mist-hidden. To the most of us, life is a very level plain, with little, after all, accomplished.

On Monday morning last, March 27, the sweet and gentle spirit of Reverend Dr. Louis E. Barrett was wafted to the shores of another realm, about which, for forty years, he has thundered from many pulpits—with eloquent and prophetic words. He passed away in just such a manner as one would wish—like a beautiful, stately ship, her voyage finished, her cargo unloaded, her duties ended, going down, not in the tempestuous, wave-washed ocean, but rather in the peaceful quiet of the haven. His death came from the infirmities of age. He was 80 years old.

Dr. Barrett had been in failing health for several years, but his condition became alarming last week, and he gradually grew worse until the end.

The funeral was held in Chestertown M. E. Church Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Omar E. Jones, assisted by Rev. W. A. Wise, Dist. Supt., Revs. G. P. Jones, Wm. R. Mowbray, A. H. Covey, N. O. Gibson, and A. P. Prettyman. At the grave the following officiated: Revs. J. A. Leach, J. M. Lindale, G. E. Sterling, T. C. Smoot and O. H. Connelly.

Interment was in Chester cemetery. C. L. Dodd, undertaker.

The active pall-bearers were: M. A. Toulson, P. M. Brooks, Wm. T. Brown, J. D. Bacchus, M. E. Newsome, Harry B. Rote, Dr. H. G. Simpers, Wm. B. Copper, Prof. Mark Creasy and A. L. Sterling.

The honorary pall-bearers were: J. C. Davis, Charles H. Jefferson, Col. Wm. J. Vannort, J. B. McIntire, M. W. Thomas, T. S. Bordley, H.H. Klinefelter, W. I. Walker, I. R. Leaverton, and John H. Terrell.

Dr. Barrett was one of the most prominent ministers in the Wilmington Conference. In early life he devoted his attention to the newspaper business, being on the editorial staff of the Easton Gazette. He soon felt called to the ministry and from the time of his entry into the Wilmington Conference to the date of his retirement, several years ago,he filled many of the most important charges in the Conference. He was several times presiding elder of the conference and had several offers to bigger pastorates, but preferred the life of the quiet, country town. One of the most important posts offered him was that of Mt. Vernon M. E. Church, one of the largest M. E. Churches in Baltimore, and in fact, in Methodism. This Dr. Barrett declined, stating that he was too old for such a charge.

During his ministry Dr. Barrett served charges in Wilmington, Dover, Milford, Lewes, Elkton and Chestertown, in the latter place enjoying a ministry of seven years, holding the record for the longest pastorate of any minister who ever served Chestertown charge. Soon after leaving Chestertown Dr. Barrett's life-long companion, his wife, went to her reward.

Sickness overtook the sturdy frame of Dr, Barrett soon after the demise of his wife and for many months he hung between life and death in Elkton Hospital, where he was stationed. Some time later he married Miss Terrell, of Elkton, and together they lived happily in Chestertown, enjoying the confidence and esteem of a host of friends here and over the entire peninsula.

Since his retirement from the ministry Dr. Barrett has lived a quiet life, only occasionally filling nearby pulpits and delivering addresses at public gatherings, his last public utterance being at Washington College during the recent visit of Judge Parker, who said the prayer he delivered was one of the most beautiful and touching he ever heard.

Dr. Barrett was one of the most eloquent speakers in the Conference and had contemplated attending the recent sessions of that body if his health had permitted it. A few days previous to his last illness he was on the streets of Chestertown, where he was greeted by many friends.

Dr. Barrett was known and loved by all denominations of Christians in this section, where he had greatly endeared himself, and with 50 years of service in the ministry completed, it was but natural that he should come to this section, above all others, to spend the few remaining years of his long and useful life by the peaceful shores of the Chester, which he loved so well. He was a great lover of this peninsula and this county especially, and his thoughts seemed almost moulded by the graceful curves of our streams, by winding paths in woods and by the charm of quiet country roads, over which he loved to walk until sufficient strength was not at hand to do so. He seemed a part of nature itself and his eloquent sermons were teeming with the joy of the great out-of-doors.

The kindness of his nature and his mental activity were his best traits. In all his dealings with men, women or children no kinder heart ever beat in human breast than his. There was a light in his face, a chord in his voice and a pressure in his hand which were full of love for his fellow beings. His manners were ardent and demonstrative with those to whom he was attracted and he filled the private circle with sunlight and with magnetic currents. He had the joyous spirits of boyhood and the robust intellectuality of manhood, perhaps more perfectly blended than any one we ever knew. Such a man was almost irresistible and it bound people to him as with bonds of steel. The kind heart and the open hand never accompany a suspicious, distrustful mind, and so Dr. Barrett was loved by us all.

His boyhood life contains a great lesson, especially to young men commencing a career of honorable ambition. He entered upon the ordeal of life with nothing upon which to rely but his intellect and his indomitable will and with sheer force of character and ability reached the top of the ladder of his profession.

And as he lived so he died. Proudly and unshrinkingly he passed beyond the twilight's purple hills to that vast realm where the innumerable dwell, but he has left with us his wealth of thought and deed—the memory of a brave, upright, honest man, who bowed, undaunted and unafraid, to death.

The prophets of God have the right of way. They seem to come by divine appointment. They kindle a torch that time cannot quench. Like coral continents, they grow on forever and often make a bend in the stream of history.

Touched by the pathos of all human life, knowing the shadows that fall on every heart,—the thorns in every path, the sighs, the sorrows and the tears that lie between a mother's arms and death's embrace,—this man preached the doctrine of love and added to the wealth of human joy and his life was "like a harvest that grew the more by reaping."

Mr. James T. Anthony, one of the most well-known and highly respected citizens of this section, died at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Kreeger, on Front Street, Chestertown, Tuesday night, at 9.30, of paralysis of the heart, aged 73 years and 6 months.

On the day previous, in company with his son, Mr. Townsend Anthony, he motored to Hillsboro, where his wife is buried, and spent a most pleasant and happy day, but was taken ill upon his return with what was thought to be an attack of indigestion. However he recovered from this attack, apparently, and was thought to be on the road to convalescence. A recurrence of the attack, however, resulted in his death.

He is survived by three sons and four daughters, namely: Randolph, of Ohio; Rumsey and Townsend, of this section; Mrs. English, of North Carolina; Mrs. Jester, of Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. J. S. Kreeger, of Chestertown; and Miss Estelle, of Washington, D.C.

Funeral services were held on Friday morning from the home of his son-in-law, Mr. J. S. Kreeger, conducted by Rev. Omar E. Jones. The interment was at Hillsboro. Undertaker W. T. Hicks.

When one, whom we have for many year held in high regard and deep respect, has reached the end of life and laid his burdens down, it is but natural for us, his friends left upon the "shifting sands of time," to pay some tribute of respect and love, to tell of his virtues and to express some sense of loss.

We were closely associated with Mr. Anthony for many years as a neighbor and on many occasions almost as a companion. He was always kind, generous, neighborly, just to all and willing to lend a listening ear to your troubles and lend a helping hand. He was just and honest in all his dealings and easily approached for advice and counsel.

He came to this section about 20 years ago and purchased the farm in Queen Annes near Chester River bridge, now occupied by Mr. Ramie Ziesal. At that time that section of Queen Anne's county was barren and unfriendly to the efforts of the tiller of the soil. Mr. Anthony, however, was a genius in agriculture and by the introduction of up-to-date methods, and untiring devotion to his work, he brought the land to a high state of productiveness, and in a few years what had once been land that had been unprofitable to ones who had attempted to reap a harvest upon, blossomed into a land of productiveness, and yielded up its hidden store of plenty.

It was his guiding hand, also, that was greatly instrumental in the development of that section into smaller farms, and during his residence there he saw many substantial homes arise and many new industries spring into life, giving profit to the owners and making the whole section more profitable and more desirable in which to live.

As an agriculturist and as a horticulturist, he ranked among the leading men of the state of Maryland, and gave much study and time to the raising of good cattle, and in all of these useful and sceinitfic occupations he gave a helping hand to many by advise which was almost invaluable to them.

He was elected in 1919 State Grange Master and has served in this capacity in a most efficient and painstaking manner since that time. The Grange, under the guidance of Mr. Anthony, soon took on new life, until it became a factor of great importance in the life and activities of the state of Maryland.

Mr. Anthony was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and served that great body well, both by active work and by lofty example. One of his greatest pleasures was the work of the church, and he will be greatly missed there. He is numbered among those whose name is chronicled in letters bright on the Scroll of the Most High.

Before the high tide of the real estate boom in this section Mr. Anthony sold his farm to Mr. William Keeler, who came here from Canada, at a good advance in price over that which it cost him, and since that time he has led a more retired life, making his home with his different children. Not long after moving from the home place the life of Mr. Anthony was saddened deeply by the death of his beloved wife, his companion of nearly half a century.

Later he purchased the Brown house and, after having the same remodeled to his taste, he has resided there since with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Kreeger.

He was an active advocate for many years of the cause of temperance and he was not afraid to state his position at times when the occasion demanded it. He was a candidate for Congress, on the prohibition ticket, and, although defeated, polled a big vote from representative people in his Congressional District and especially in his home county.

Mr. Anthony reached a ripe old age. He enjoyed life in his quiet way, being particularly fond of good literature and the enjoyments of a refined and cultivated taste. He was closely allied with the progress and uplift of this community for many years and in many ways. His life was an influence for good and for the uplift of the general public.

Mrs. Martha O. Baxter, widow of the late John T. Baxter, of Queen Anne's county, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clara Spry, Church Hill, Thursday of last week, aged 81 years. Mrs. Baxter, before her marriage was a Miss Sudler. She is survived by four sons, A. Sudler Baxter, Charles Baxter and Joseph E. Baxter, of Queen Anne's, and Frank Baxter, of Kent county, and a daughter, Mrs. Spry, of Church Hill.
