My Old-Fashioned Mother

By W. H. Myers

My old-fashioned mother! How well
I remember
Her grace and her beauty; her truth
and her love;
Her voice, meek and gentle, to me was
as music
In beauty and richness like angels
above:
Her hair like the snow, I shall always remember
As with cap made of lace it was ever adorned.
So simple, so real, so void of deception,
My old-fashioned mother how oft I have mourned.

Many times when a child I her mandates unheeded,
And thought I knew better and took my own way.
How meekly and gently she showed me my error
And kindly entreated that I should obey!
My old-fashioned mother, when sickness or sorrow Invaded our home, making all sad and lone,
Had some way of doing to make the way brighter—
I know not the secret, but somehow
'twas done.

Oh, ye, who today have a kind mother with you Love, cherish and prize her while here
she may stay.
Some day you will miss her when most
she is needed.
Then show your affection and love
while you may;
Then tenderly, lovingly, smooth down
her pathway;
Make the years that remain seem to her as the best;
Let her lean on your arm as she enters the valley
To live in that land where is promised a rest.

Maryland To Have Own Crop Reports

A crop reporting service similar to that now in effect in many other states has been established for Maryland through a recent agreement between the United States Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates and the University of Maryland Extension Service.

John S. Denee, formerly located at Atlanta as agricultural statistician for Georgia and the United States Department of Agriculture, has been assigned to head the new department and will have his office at College Park.

The new department will give Maryland the advantages of a co-operative service for the collection and publication of crop and live-stock statistics without the confusions of duplicate sets of reports which are unavaidable where State and Federal agencies work independently.

When Pipes Of Pan Are Blowing

Over the hills I hear them calling—
That only I can hear.
Sweet and low, like a wood-bird's fluting
The pipes of Pan, so thin and clear—

It is the voice of April calling!
That I hear when pipes of Pan are blowing,
The note of spring, so soft and low,
Calling, and I must go.

Where April, in robes of green is walking,
And joy-mad linnets sing,
I must follow, follow the wild pipes' music
And dance at the gates of spring!

Or is it the wind in pine tops sighing,
Like the voice of a far-off sea?
Or is it the sound of the silver raindrops
That I hear calling me?
