HAVE KEPT GALLIC QUALITY

People of Anatolia Believed to Be Survivors of Those Who Founded Ancient Galatia.

Below the surface of the general Turkish-Moslem unity of Anatolia of today singular strains appear, both religious and racial. In the central ranges of the Pontiac range, for instance, lie the villages of a people called in Turkish, "Kizilbashes"—"Redheads." They differ markedly in physical type from the other Anatolian peasants about them, being either light brunette or blond. The beards of the men are light brown and curly, unlike those of the Turks. They are in all probability the survivors of old Gallic tribes who hewed their way into central Anatolia in the Third century before Christ, founded the Galatian kingdom, and later accepted Christianity. They now profess to be Mohammedans. But they do things that no orthodox Turk will do, writes W. L. Westermann in Asia Magazine. Their women, for example, go unveiled; and they eat with the men. Once a year a priest appears among them and in secret they partake of the communion. These Kizilbashes represent a case of incomplete conversion to Islam, as well as incomplete racial mixture. Throughout the Near East many such strange survivals are to be found, broken bits of ancient peoples, of primitive Christian beliefs, even of pre-Christian pagan religious rites—curious relics of the past.

VOICE RETAINS ITS QUALITY

Fixed Feature of Human Vocal Organs Which Is Regarded as Something of a Phenomenon.

The changes that come with age, observes the editor of the New York Medical Journal, are so manifold and striking that we are inclined to overlook the persistence through the years of the quality of the voice, and yet this one fixed feature is remarkable. Even those who have lost most semblance to their former selves have not lost to any extent the peculiar organs of their voice.

When one notes that the organs which, in their functioning and, hence, in their structure, have so endured, are relatively small and delicate and in very frequent use, the phenomenon is of greater interest. A vocal apparatus may be injured or worn by overuse, and the power of a singer does not last for life. But, though its flexibility, power and range may diminish, for ordinary purposes the quality of speech remains easily recognizable and apparently but slightly influenced, compared with the all-too-apparent decay and destruction which has gone forward with the passage of a decade or two.

This Fits Most of Us.

Henry Ward Beecher, so the story goes, was once asked by a young preacher how he could make his congregation keep wide awake and attentive during his sermons. Beecher replied that he always had a man watch for sleepers, with instructions, as soon as he saw anyone start nodding or dozing, to hasten to the pulpit and wake up the preacher. Aren't you and I usually less sensible? Would we not be inclined to have the watcher wake up, not ourselves, but the fellows caught sleeping? In other words, aren't we disposed always to blame others? When things go wrong in an organization the president usually feels it is necessary for him to shake up his associates. His associates, in turn, usually start kicking up ructions with those under them. And workers, when they are dissatisfied, usually lay the blame, not at their own door but at the door of the foreman or the department head or the big boss—somebody, anybody, except ourselves.

How about adding this Beecher squib to what we always carry around with us in our mind?—Forbes Magazine.

Some Detective.

A lot of bank notes had been stolen in London, and word reached a detective that an old woman who was a notorious "fence" had at least one of them. Proceeding to her house he made a thorough search of the rooms, but without success.

Turning to the woman and handing her back the candle she had lent him to work with, he said: "Well, this time I confess I am beaten. Tell me where it is, mother, and I'll get you off."

The promise was sufficient. "You've had it in your hand for the last half hour," she said, "and gave it me back this minute. It's wrapped around the candle."—Boston Transcript.

The Boat of Life.

The little boat of our life labors in the trough of the sea, and we cannot see out at all. We are lifted to a wave-crest and look out, momentarily, over the troubled waters, happy if we can see, in the distance, the islands, with their fronded palms and mountains, whose summits lift to the blue dome of the sky. Again the trough of the sea engulfs us, and we cannot see. All I can offer is the vision from a single wave-crest: what the next may show, no one can foresee.—From "For What Do We Live," by Edward Howard Griggs.

One American Language.

When a "Pennsylvania Dutchman" is on his vacation, he is having his "off." When anything is finished, with those same folk, it is "all." So when said P. D. tells you his "off" is "all," you know his vacation has ended.—Farm Life.

TWICE PROVEN

If you suffer backache, sleepless nights, tired, dull days and distressing urinary disorders, don't experiment. Read this twice-told testimony. It's Chestertown evidence—doubly proven.

Mrs. Jas. P. Parrott, 200 S. Front St., gave the following statement Aug. 17, 1916: "I had been troubled off and on with kidney disorder and backache. My kidneys were irregular in action and caused annoyance. I had spells of dizziness and saw black spots and fiery flashes before my eyes I was tired and miserable most of the time. I began to use Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me relief. I generally keep Doan's on hand and can recommend them highly."

On Jan. 26, 1921, Mrs. Parrott said: "Doan's Kidney Pills have practically cured me of kidney complaint. It is seldom I have the least trouble now, as I resort to Doan's at the first sign of my kidneys being out of order and they give me prompt relief."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Parrott had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Tired

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

. . . I began using Cardui," continues Mrs. Burnett. "After my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, feel just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.
