Former Kent Man Drowned

While 500 excursionists watched, members of the crew of the steamer Joppa Saturday failed in an attempt to save William E. Jewell, of Baltimore, chief engineer of the boat, from being drowned, at Sandy Hill, Md. Mr. Jewell is a relative of Mr. Theodore Jewell, of Chestertown, and formerly resided in this county.

The Joppa plies between Seaford and Baltimore. It had carried a Sunday School party from Seaford to Sandy Hill. An hour before the return Mr. Jewell entered the water. Witnesses said he called for help when he found he was beyond his depth. The body was soon recovered but efforts at resuscitation were unavailing. He was 42 years old and leaves a widow.
