Old Houses In Kent Being Rebuilt

Many old houses in Kent have been rebuilt during the past few years and this condition exists all over the United States, according to lumbermen.

Following the building shortage of late years has come an appreciation that any house, old or new, has untold possibilities of alteration. Architects have been called upon to produce instances of before and after of barnlike structures made over into charming houses. Old barns have been rebuilt into studios, sheds and warehouses into residences of taste.

There is an enormous demand on the northwest planing mills for mouldings, trimmings, shingles, sidings, inside finishings, lumber and fancy graind fir, hemlock or cedar for cabinet work.

Lumbermen declare this demand has come from the alteration wave over the nation, repairing and adding building features.

Lyceum Course At The College

For the first time in some years Washington College is to conduct a course of lectures and concerts during the coming months. Entertainments have been scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 29, Monday, Dec. 18, Friday, Jan. 26, Wednesday, Feb. 14 and Saturday, March 3.

The series contains lectures, concerts and other artistic entertainments. The first number is to be a lecture by Louis Williams on the wonders of electricity. Apparatus valued in the tens of thousands of dollars will be used. The audience is to be treated to a series of dazzling experiments illustrating the wonders of this modern wizardry.

Season tickets have just been put on sale at $1.25 for the five concerts. Single admissions will be fifty cents. It is hoped that the present course will be so well patronized that a more ambitious program can be undertaken next year.

Grange Notes

Notwithstanding the dense floating fog that enveloped the locality and rendered travel difficult to young vision as well as old; notwithstanding it was election night and many were absent awaiting the outcome, anxious to know whether Scotland's chief or the Republican, France, carried off the palm, and voters and non-voters wondering whether Caroline's or Talbot's candidate won! Yes, in the face of even greater discouragements than these—yea, the finding of the Grange's fine "art collelition," lompletely demolished, all seemed to stimulate the 25 members present, to inrrease their zeal and build memorials more durable and able to stand the test of time.

Business matters had somewhat accumulated and were dispatched and checked off as rapidly as possible.

The greater part of the evening was spent in discussing and arranging for "Home Coming Week," to be celebrated by Still Pond Grange Tuesday, Nov. 14, 7.30 p. m., at Grange Hall.

State Lecturer, Mrs. Harry Williams, has promised a number and we are confident no Still Pond Granger ants to miss that talk, full of pep and rendered in Mrs. Williams' attractive manner.

A special program, with a special tip off for the inner man, has been arranged and a card party arranging all members to come.

Now, with all these inducements, we shall ssrely have a hll house—if not a royal flush.

PRESS CORRESPONDENT.

Today Is Armistice Day

Today is Armistice Day in the United States. Four years ago today Germany threw up her arms and lay impotent at the feet of her conquerors. The day will be fittingly observed in all parts of the country.

The day will be most fittingly observed in Kent County, under the auspices of the American Legion. The ex-service men of Kent County, the students of Washington College and the students of the Elementary and High Schools will march from Legion Headquarters to Washington College Campus, where the flag will be raised in honor of the war heroes. There will also be speeches. In the afternoon Washington College and Gallaudet will meet in a most interesting football contest.

A ceremony that will probably become the precedent for future years will be observed at the grave of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery, Washington, today. President Harding, Secretary of War Weeks, Secretary of Navy Denby will go to Arlington and place a wreath of flowers on the tomb. It is possible that the President may make a brief address. The President and Secretaries Weeks and Denby will leave the White House at 10 o'clock. On arrival at the Virginia side of the Georgetown bridge a squadron of cavalry will form a military escort and a national salute will be fired from Fort Myer as the cortege passes into the cemetery.
