POCOMOKE RISES FROM ASHES

In Eight Months One-Third Of The Burned Area Has Been Rebuilt

A gale of wind and a pile of burning trash on April 17 last were the ingredients that mixed so well that the news in a few hours was sent out that this little city was being burned to the ground. That telegram was written in a hotel with the roof burning. The message was handled by telephone operators in a room in which the window sashes were afire. This was the message that brought apparatus for fighting fire from every town on the lower Eastern Shore. It brought, too, back to Pocomoke the assurance that Maryland men and women were ready to help in any possible way.

Before the fire had died out a visitor saw the ruined acres that had only a short while before held 55 dwellings and a score of business houses. He saw property estimated to be worth $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 in ashes. He saw, too, dozens of carpenters rushing the construction of a temporary store on ground that was still hot. That store was completed, stocked and opened for business in ten days. Pocomoke last spring, with a grateful heart, said to Maryland, "We will rebuild at once." And they did. As Chicago, San Francisco and Baltimore sprang from the ashes which were the ruin of a devastating fire, so Pocomoke arose from its ashes and will, in a year or so, present one of the finest-looking and most modern towns on the Eastern Shore. The thrift and foresight of their people stand as a monument to them.

MARSHES PROFITABLE IN KENT

Farmers And Trappers Will Soon Begin Again To Reap A Golden Harvest

At the present prices of farm products such as wheat and corn, many mash lands of Kent bring in more profit per acre than the clear land of the farm.

There is quite a large acreage of marsh land in Kent county which is utterly useless for anything but trapping purposes, which is one of the most profitable businesses that many of our people will engage in during the winter. In many cases these marshes are rented out and bring to their owners more clear money without any expense than a farm of ordinary size brings.

For the first time in the history of Talbot county one of these marshes belonging to the Eliott brothers, containing 280 acres, was sold at public sale in front of the Easton Court House, and the bidding for the privilege of trapping on it was spirited, considering that the trapping season only lasts two months and a half. This marsh brought $900, which is the interest on $15,000, and the purchasers were David Cohen, of Easton; Joseph Watts and Homer Whiteley, of Snow Hill. Last year these men paid $300 for the marsh and caught 1400 muskrats off it that netted them $1.50 each.

Kent county has many marshes just as valuable as the one mentioned above and the owners and renters, from Jan. 1 to March 15, will make considerable money from them.

—The real estate of the late Joseph E. George, consisting of 16 farms in Kent and Queen Anne's counties, has been apportioned among the heirs by a commission appointed by the trustee.

The Nation's Crops

The nation's crops this year are worth $7,572,890,000, based on their farm value, as of December 1, the Department of Agriculture recently announced.

Their value is $1,842,978,000 more than last year's crops, reflecting improvement in prices for farm products prevailing now as compared with a year ago and increased production in some crops. This year's farm production is worth about the same as that of 1916, but is lower than 1920 by about $1,500,000,000 and lower than any year since 1915, except last year. It is only a little more than half as much as the record value year of 1919.

Record production was made this year in rye, white potatoes, sweet potatoes and hay. Other bumper crops this year were rice, with the third largest crop in history, wheat with the fifth largest production and corn with its seventh largest crop. Cotton this year is the fourth most valuable crop of that staple ever grown, although a small crop in point of production.

Corn, as usual, is the country's most valuable crop, being worth this year $700,000,000 more than last year with a total value of $1,900,287,000. Cotton stands second, with $1,368,517,000, the lint being valued at $1,190,761,000 and the cottonseed $177,756,000. Hay is the third most valuable crop, with a total of $1,331, 679,000. What was valued at $864,139,000, standing as fourth most valuable crop of the country.

Delaware Man Attempts To End Life

John Bullock, aged about 45 years, of Cannon, Del., about four miles from Seaford, presented a gruesome sight to his wife on Wednesday of last week, when he walked into her room before she had gotten out of bed with his throat cut and blood streaming all over him from the wound. Mrs. Bullock, horrified, hurried to the telephone and called two Seaford physicians, who made a record run to the man's side and succeeded in saving his life. Bullock had gotten out of bed ahead of his wife and when she asked him if he was going down stairs to make the kitchen fire, preparatory to getting breakfast, he replied in the affirmative. Two small children of the Bullocks had preceded their father down the stairs, and when they went into the room where he was discovered he had cut his throat, but Bullock got up stairs before they could tell their mother.

—Winter wheat sowings this fall, estimated by the Department of Agriculture recently at 46,069,000 acres, are the third largest ever planted by the farmers of the country, but the condition of the crop is somewhat below par, being 8.4 points below the 10-year Dec. 1 average condition. The area sown in rye this fall is 11.3 per cent less than sown a year ago.
