More Telephones

During the past ten years the number of telephones in Maryland has increased 53 per cent. In some cities and towns the increase is 100 per cent.

This growth has naturally been of great benefit to our subscribers. The usefulness and value of the service to the patron in any city, town or community depend largely upon the number of people with whom he can talk by telephone.

The importance of telephone service in the business and social life of a city, town or community makes its growth and theirs go hand in hand as a matter of course. But the Telephone Company's aim is to go further than that—to make its service so dependable and its rates so attractive that it will be constantly expanding to embrace new areas and serve a larger number of people. In this way, its service becomes more valuable to the telephone user.

Not only has its growth been greater in proportion than the growth of the population, but the quality of its equipment and the efficiency of its service has more than kept pace with its growth.

Judge Harlan, in the Circuit Court this week, handed down an opinion which is of interest to all the owners of dogs in Havre de Grace.

There was passed during the Legislative session of 1922 an act, attempting to exempt the City of Havre de Grace from the provisions of the State-wide dog law, which provided in substance that the owners of dogs in the City of Havre de Grace should purchase their license tags from the Mayor and City Council, instead of from the Treasurer of Harford County, as provided by the State-wide law.

Edgar M. Geathers, a member of the City Council, who had purchased a tag for his dog from the Mayor and City Council, was arrested in the Second Election District for not having purchased a County tag as provided by the State wide law. A test was made of the law before Judge Harlan, who has filed an opinion in the case, holding that the Act of 1922 is invalid and for that reason the Mayor and City Council is without authority to collect taxes on any dogs in this city.

POULTRY

ITEMS CONCERNING THE CARE AND TREATMENT OF LARGE AND SMALL FLOCKS THAT WILL INTEREST OUR POULTRYMEN

Kent County poultrymen who want early broilers and early layers should get them out at once. The prices for early broilers, especially, make the raising of early chickens profitable, if you are prepared to handle them. Don't try it if you are not prepared, because the chances are too many against you making a success.

The hatchery at the Queen Anne Poultry Farm and hatchery has begun to turn out chicks in large numbers for northern markets and the local trade, while the Bramble Poultry Farm hatchery has also begun to supply its orders, the first hatch coming off Monday.

There were 100 pens of 20 birds each in the Vineland, N. J., contest. In this total were 7 Barred Rock pens, 6 White Rock pens, 8 White Wyandotte pens, 12 R. I. Red pens and 67 White Leghorn pens. A pen of Barred Rocks, owned by Glenlyn Farms, Penna., finished the year which ended Oct. 31, 1922, with the high record. The production of this pen was 3,921 eggs.

Down in Easton, Talbot county, they claim that the chickens business has ruined the prospect for good roads, because they eat all the shell available. This prevents the county from securing shell for roads. Next!

We are at the peak of the ages. Nineteen-twenty-three is the biggest year in a thousand different ways since the dawn of creation. But if it is filled with the largest possibilities, it is also filled with the largest responsibilities. Above all things, don't lose heart. We know despondency will or is knocking at the portals, but turn a deaf ear and fight the good fight.

All through the winter, occasionally, your flock will be benefitted by the occasional addition to the dry or moistened mash of a tablespoonful of sulphur to the quart of mash.

Roup and chicken pox frequently occur at this season of the year as well as others. If your flock is affected, try six pounds of sulphur to a hundred laying hens. Put same in mash. It is recommended by many.

High average egg production can be and is combined with beauty according to Standard ideals in some strains. Others seem to care little how much they sacrilce. Standard beauty requirements if they can attain big egg yields. Look over the breeder's advertising matter and size up what he offers. Stock mated to produce exhibition quality progeny may disappoint you when compared with fowls of same variety in show pens. Judge breeding stock by the young birds it delivers and what they produce. Heavy laying hens and males which have been in active breeding service lose much of the finish they possessed when newly arrived at maturity. Learn to make allowance for performance and condition.

As we have stated before, there is no best breed. Personally, we prefer Rocks and Leghorns, but someone else prefers Reds and Minorcas. So there you are.
