Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over thirty years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the wrapper all these years just to protect the coming generations. Do not be deceived. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

Never attempt to relieve your baby with a remedy that you would use for yourself.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Comfort—The Mother's Friend.

Rules and Regulations

In a large organization such as ours, performing a tremendously intricate service, it is absolutely necessary that there be some rules and regulations—some orderly method of procedure.

But at times situations come up that are not covered by rules or regulations and which can not be foreseen. When these cases do arise, telephone employees are expected to use good judgment and to do satisfactorily the thing that the circumstances call for.

Likewise, there are times when an explanation given does not satisfy the patron. When this is the case, the patron is entirely justified in asking to speak with someone higher in authority or someone more familiar with the subject under discussion.

In other words, when you come to our office or call us by telephone, it is our desire and aim that you shall receive courteous and intelligent attention—the kind that goes hand in hand with satisfactory telephone service.

PANCAKES PAST AND PRESENT

Comparison Made That Is by No Means Flattering to the Delicacy Today.

The pancake of our fathers was a noble circular structure, spreading its wrinkled suburbs to the edge of the plate where the potter had wisely provided terraces. The radius must have been all of three inches. Within the area, duly buttered and sweetened, was gustatory poetry, such glory and wonder and delight and smacking savor that the hired man, facing the breakfast table, ceased altogether to grumble over a fate that got him out of bed before dawn. Appetites in the good old days were magnificent institutions, the finest products of open-air living and service at the plow handles. But for all these grand proportions, no one could eat more than eight or ten pancakes at a sitting. The things were filling. They took up room like a good farm horse in his stall. At a quarter past the zero hour everyone at the table cried "Enough," even the hired man. The pancake of our fathers was no fluffy affair, after the manner of our modern desserts, that made a man ask what he'd eaten after he'd eaten it. In a contest between neighbors in a Long Island village some time ago, a native consumed 73 pancakes, so-called. The incident adds to the sorry evidence that this is a decadent age. It is proof that the pancake of the day is some miserable travesty of the honest, whole-souled pancake of blessed tradition.—Toledo Blade.

INSOMNIA CAN BE BANISHED

Trouble Is, With Too Many of Us, That the "Prescription" Is Hard to Take.

There is a cure for insomnia, but it is likely to be something awful—a ten-mile walk in the country or sawing wood for four hours. One has to give up all other activities, it seems, when one "rassles it out" with insomnia.

Nobody has time for sawing wood for four hours except deposed European monarchs—favored ones of earth whom even a revolution gives leisure. Theodore Roosevelt, who enjoyed so amply all that the world had to give, cut down trees for purposes of bodily invigoration; but then he had the trees to cut down; so also, Gladstone.

Hard, physical labor these great ones considered necessary for their well-being; and it is thoroughly established that it is the best lure of sleep, "balmy sleep, tired nature's sweet restorer." The point in that quotation is that one has to be tired; not tired in the cares that infest the day, but tired in the legs, arms and dorsal muscles. One can chase away insomnia if one gives his undivided attention to it. That's the difficulty.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Ungainly Flamingo.

The flamingo, so beautiful in coloring and graceful in flight, is not especially beautiful in build. In shape it is midway between a goose and a stork, ranging, when full-grown between 5 and 6½ feet in height. Its humped body is supported on legs amazingly long and thin, while its slender neck curves upwards like a big letter S, and ends in a small head with a great flat, down-curving beak. The lower part of this beak forms a deep, broad box, into which the upper part fits like a cover. When the bird is feeding on shellfish or water plants in the shallows and flats the neck is twisted like a corkscrew until the head is upside down; then the top of the beak is pushed along through the mud like a scoop shovel, gathering in the food morsels. During the nesting period the female builds a curious mound of mud like a tiny volcano, in the crater of which a single egg is laid. On this the mother is said to sit with legs drawn up like a grotesque statue on a pedestal.

Oldtime Pharmacies.

Many ancient wood cuts show the pharmacies of the day—usually a mortar and pestle occupy a table in the middle of the room and many shelves on the walls are filled with bottles. Before the introduction of chemistry into pharmacy, a mortar was almost all the equipment that was needed. There were no complicated pills or ointments to be made. In the place of labels the bottles or containers bore the coats of arms of titled families and the badges of cities.

In the Sixteenth century there was a reformation in pharmacy. Labels appeared on bottles, and every kind of drug or preparation was carefully preserved in a fitting container. In England Paracelsus simplified the art of preserving by the discovery of tinctures, extracts and metallic salts.

Handel Expurgated.

The following anecdote is given in the preface to a copy of Dr. John Clark's edition of the "Messiah," the testimonial of which is signed by Henry R. Bishop, William Parsons, John Braham, and Muzio Clementi.

"Being on a visit to a friend in a country place the inhabitants of which were more primitive than scientific, Doctor Busby, on his way to church on a Sunday morning, overtook one of the choristers with a bundle of music books under his arm. 'What have you got there, my man?' said the doctor. 'Zum of Handel's music, zur, that we're goin' to zing at church today,' was the rejoinder. 'Handel,' said the querist, somewhat astonished, 'don't you find his music difficult?' 'Why,' said the countryman, 'we did at fust, zur, but we altered un a bit, and he goes very well now.'"

Farmers, List Your Repair Needs

It would be hard to find a farmer who at some time or another had not lost valuable time waiting for necessary repair parts. Take this territory and total up the time lost in this way and it will astonish you. And all because repairs are not odered as early as they should be.

There is no better time than right now—just before the busiest season on the farm—to go over your machines carefully, make a list of repairs you are likely to need and send it to us. With this list in our hands, we can order our stock so as to be prepared to meet every call promptly.

Repair part service is a necessary part of our business. We realize what it means to you in time and money to get what you need at once. Help us to help you by making up your list now and sending it in to us.
