WASHINGTON ELIMINATES MT. MARY'S FROM STATE BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP RACE ON ITS OWN FLOOR—OTHER NOTES OF THE SPORTING REALM

Speaking of a basketball team, for all time, how does this one sound? Kibler and Kaldwell, forwards; Kain, center; Karroll and Karrington, guards. There you have the greatest scoring combination, uniquely arranged, that ever played the game on the local floor. Dumschot is regarded by many as better than Caldwell, Gordy has many friends who claim he was better than Cain, while Fiore is, perhaps, as good a guard as Carroll or Carrington, but their names did not begin with a C or a K, and that eliminated them, anyhow. But, even at that, the combination we have mentioned above, could probably have defeated any aggregation in the country.

Washington College eliminated Mt. St. Mary's from the state basketball championship race Saturday night on their own floor, taking the second and final game of the series from them by the score of 31 to 22. About three weeks ago W. C. defeated them just as easily on the local floor. Mt. St. Mary's held the state championship three years in succession, but were no match for Washington's five, which is one of the fastest in the country.

Washington jumped into the lead at the very start and in about five minutes held a 10-0 score against Mt. St. Mary's this lead they held and increased it as the game progressed. The end of the first half found them having a 14 point lead over their opponents.

The second half found Washington playing a safe game, taking it easy and scoring almost at will.

The all-around work of the team was of a high calibre, but Carrington, who, during the past five games, has been the outstanding figure, again was the star of the game, getting six goals, most of which were from long distances and difficult angles. When you consider the fact of his great scoring ability, as well as his great defensive work, we have no doubt that Carrington is the greatest guard who ever played the game here. Washington has had some good ones,—such as Duyer, Young, Biddle, Robbins, Fiore and a great host of others, but we doubt, as of real value to the team, if Carrington's equal has ever been on the floor.

Dumschott played his wonderful game at forward, while Carroll did likewise, while Gordy and Fiore were all in fine form.

Coach Kibler's five has simply outclassed every team which has faced them this year.

We want to say a few words today about Johnston and Lohran, last year's guards of the regular team, and this year second string men. These two boys are two of the finest basketball men ever seen on the local floor. Lohran is, primarily, a forward, rather than a guard. He is a fine shot and can advance the ball wonderfully. He is not, however, quite as good a forward as either Dumschot or Carroll, and not quite as good a guard as Fiore or Carrington. This keeps him in the background somewhat, but as a utility man, who Coach Kibler can use in an emergency, his value is beyond estimation. The same thing is true of Johnston. There doubtless has never been a more aggressive player on the floor than him. But he is not quite as large or strong as Fiore, and being a guard, he stays slightly in the background. But he, too, is of great value to the team. With such men as Lohran and Johnston to depend on, Coach Kibler can meet almost any emergency that might arise.

Washington College and Western Maryland College have severed athletic relations. It seems that Western Maryland wants Washington play on their home grounds altogether, no matter if it is basketball, football or what not that is being contested. This Washington refused to do. W. C. has several grievances against Western Maryland. After playing three games with Western Maryland on their own field, Washington wanted the game to come here this year, which Western Maryland refused. It has been customary for the two teams to exchange games alternately, but Washington, to hold Western Maryland on its schedule, played there three years in succession. Further disagreement came about concerning the basketball schedule. Western Maryland asked to be released from its game on Feb. 3 and in its place offered March 13, two weeks after W. C. ended its season. Washington then refused to go to Western Maryland and both contests were off. When one team wants all the dates favorable to its own interests, without regard to the other, we think it about time they stop playing at all until they can get together on a more equitable basis.

Washington played Temple University last night on the local floor. The game was, without doubt, a good one, as Temple is said to have a good combination. No one, however, looks for them to defeat Washington. Tonight Washington will play the University of Pennsylvania Jr. Varsity. Washington plays this team every year and the game is always interesting. We look for Washington to win both of the games. Washington plays P. M. C. at Chester Feb. 20; St. John's at Annapolis Feb. 23; Blue Ridge at Chestertown Feb. 24; ending the season with Loyola here on Feb. 28. We look for Washington to go through with a clean slate, with state championship honors easy.

May Cut Their Own Pay

Representative Webb has introduced a bill to reduce the compensation of members of the legislature from $10 to $5 per day, and of the presiding officers from $11 to $6 per day.

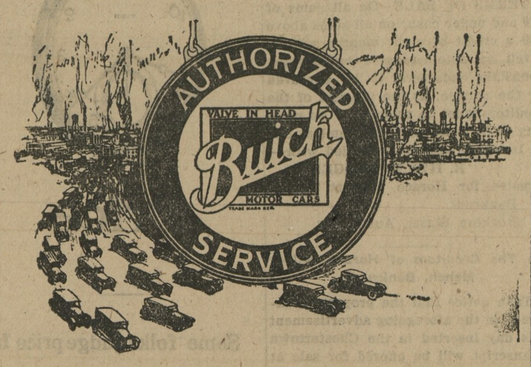

For many years our legislators served efficiently for $3 per day. At the 1869 sesion, when gold was at a high premium, the late William Dean valiantly insisted that the pay should be on a gold basis, and the allowance was made for the gold premium in making up the members pay roll.

The new Constitution adopted in 1897 fixed the rate of compensation at $5 per day. Subsequent Legislators gredily approved an amendment increasing the allowance to $10, with a dollar extra per day for the presiding officers. And this compensation is very liberal.

However, economy is now the demand at Dover, and the members of the legislature are disposed to give heed to it. And they could display their sincerity in no more convincing manner than by making the practical start of striking at their own official compensation.—Every Evening.
