THE TRANSCRIPT

Entered at the Postoffice at Chestertown, Md., as Second Class Matter.

ABOUT sixty editors accepted Gov. Ritchie's invitation to a meeting at Annapolis last Saturday to discuss state problems. The Governor made a fine and instructive address on what had been accomplished during his administration and what he yet hoped to do. The attendance was an unusually large one.

FARMERS ORGANIZING

That the farmers of the state are arousing to the necessity of better organization of their forces is evidenced by the numerous meetings being held in the counties throughout the state and in Baltimore City yesterday. It is a generally conceded fact that for the farmers to get what naturally belongs to them, it is necessary for better and stronger organization by them. Organization and co-operation is the only salvation for the farmers, as we view it. For the farmer to realize a living profit from his products he must be in a position to dictate prices and not in the position he is today to simply take what the city purchaser chooses to pay him. It takes a farmer months to grow his crops and after taking the chances of weather and other conditions, his crop is finally ready for market. The general rule that is followed by the farmer is, then, to put the crop on the market, either by offering it to local buyers or by shipping it to the city. No matter which he does the price he receives is fixed in Chicago, New York or some other city and he is compelled to sell for just what the city organized purchasers chose to offer him. This condition should not exist—the farmer should have something to say what his crops should sell for, but he will never be able to do so unless some other plan of marketing his crops are worked out other than the one now in vogue. Other branches of business have been made profitable by these branches setting their own prices and holding to those prices; the farmers, we believe, by organization and co-operation can make farming profitable.

The Eastern Shore Ferries

Promoters of the state subsidized ferry interests, who are speculating on the prospects of cutting through Swan Point Bar to shorten the trip between Bay Shore and Rock Hall, have been informed by Mr. John N. Mackall, Director of Public Works, that it would cost in the neighborhood of $15,000 a year to keep such a channel clear. Upon the request of C. K. Bowie, counsel for the Eastern Shore Ferry Co., and the Peninsula Ferry Co., who is interested in an amalgamation project of the two corporations, Mr. Mackall obtained data from Major F. C. Harrington, of the U. S. Engineer Corps. From Major Harrington's report it seems the average rate which the old channel shoael after it was cut was 30 per cent a year. Director Mackall has estimated roughly that it would cost $50,000 to cut the Swan Point Bar channel wide enough for a ferry boat to pass through, and that $15,000 a year would have to be expended to keep the channel clear after it is cut. The whole ferry matter is held up now in the absence of a court ruling in the Peninsula Ferry Co. bankruptcy case. The suggestion came unofficially from the Public service Commission that it might be better for the public if the two companies were to merge and operate under a single management. The ferry interests as a whole headed by Bowie began working on the proposed merger. Bowie proposed first to eliminate Rock Hall and operate between Bay Shore and Queenstown, and possibly Love Point during the summer months.
