WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Shrove Tuesday was celebrated on the Hill, as it was in most other places, by having pan cakes for supper. There were 75 quarts of batter made. Each quart averaged from 16 to 17 pancakes. If you wish to find out how popular the pancakes were with the students, just multiply 75 by 17 and divide the result by 150, and you will get the average number of cakes each student digested.

This is the way the class teams are standing in the Inter-class Basketball League to date:

	won	lost	pct.
Freshmen	7	2	.777
Special	7	2	.777
Junior	4	5	.444
Prep.	3	5	.375
Sophomore	3	4	.428
Senior	2	8	.200

It is to be noticed that the Freshmen and Specials are both tied for first place. There are only a few more games on the schedule and the contest between those two teams should prove interesting.

Feb. 13 the student body was addressed by Captain Henry, Red Cross worker in the Near East. He had just come from a territory where he had witnessed some of the encounters between Turk and Greek, and he gave the students the benefits of his knowledge. The information that he delivered was not of the distorted kind that is handed to the public by newspapers, but they were the truthful accounts of an eye witness. He told of the bloody massacres that the Turks wrought upon the Christians in the East. He told of the terrible plight of the Armenians, how they were massacred and driven from their home land, how they appealed to the world for a refuge and how some nations responded and how others did not, and how Russia offered a home for these refugees, and many more items of interest. For instance, he gave the [illegible] glimpses of the leading men of the Near East which could not be had elsewhere. Mustapha Kemal Pasha and other men who have come into the public's notice either through their good or evil deeds in the East were painted in vivid colors by a man who had the experience of knowing them and seeing their work. It seems from his speech that Captain Henry's object in coming before the students was to raise their sentiment against the terrible massacres of the Turk. If that was his purpose, it must be said that he accomplished what he desired.
