QUICK ACTION BRAKES
EXTRA LARGE AND EXTRA SAFE

In the construction of Dodge Brothers Motor Car, every consideration has been given to the owner's safety.

This is particulariy evident in the brakes, which, with their 14-inch drums and 2¼ inch lining, are appreciably larger than the average. The extra surface thus provided develops greater friction when the break bands contract over the drums—and it is this friction which stops the car."

Connecting levers are designed to transmit the maximum of power with the minimum of effort. The slightest pressure on the brake pedal has an immediate effect. This pressure is distributed evenly between the two rear wheels by a highly efficient equalizer, which prevents skidding because t retards both wheels simultaneously.

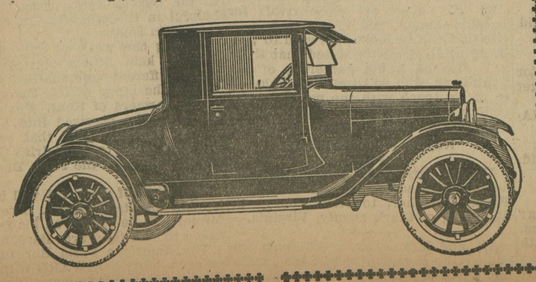

And the brake bands grip evenly all around the drums. This protects the lining against irregular wear and enables the driver to stop quickly, quietly and safely.

Farmers, List Your Repair Needs

It would be hard to find a farmer who at some time or another had not lost valuable time waiting for necessary repair parts. Take this territory and total up the time lost in this way and it will astonish you. And all because repairs are not odered as early as they should be.

There is no better time than right now—just before the busiest season on the farm—to go over your machines carefully, make a list of repairs you are likely to need and send it to us. With this list in our hands, we can order our stock so as to be prepared to meet every call promptly.

Repair part service is a necessary part of our business. We realize what it means to you in time and money to get what you need at once. Help us to help you by making up your list now and sending it in to us.

THE FARMER AND HIS WIFE

By Mrs. Evelyn Harris
Mrs. Harris' Articles In Baltimore Sun Attracting Considerable Attention

Makes no difference how tired and worn out and hungry a horse is, if he feels the whip on his haunches he will exhibit a great flush of vitality and will strain and pull the load up the long hill. The increased vitality, however, we must admit, did not come from the whip, but from the horse himself, and after the tough pull the very life energies are drained.

During the World War the farmer, under the whip of patriotism, need for food and apparent high prices, pulled a mighty hard load up hill all the way. He pulled it long hours, from sun to sun, and his wife was right there in the traces pulling with him.

The extra effort came from the farmer and his wife, and was paid for in notes at the bank, and no one complained. The whip is gone. The driver is gone. The energy is fast ebbing, and while everyone feels sorry, yet nothing is being done.

A price was set on wheat during the war, and if steel workers had not had the chance to make such big wages it would have been fine. The price set on the wheat did not give the farmer's wife the same chance it gave to the steelworker's wife. It gave the farmer and his wife a chance to more than cover cost that year. He was able, by careful doing without many things he needed, to buy a few Liberty bonds and War Savings stamps, and only by having them has he been able to live through the past three years.

The very vitality of the farmer is fast dwindling. Soon there will be no more and the farming business will have run upon a rock. Deserted farms are a disgrace to the community. Men have simply become heartsick at the idea of working day after day to grow wheat and corn and then finding at the end of the year that they are worse in the hole than when they started. Many have simply deserted and left stock and implements for the creditors to do with as they choose and have gone goodness knows where.

The Department of Agriculture says that 460,000 of them left last year alone and in many instances the wife now is making the living in the cities, as a farmer is a farmer and it is right hard to make anything else out of him.

A fairly good carpenter can be made in a year and if a fellow is apt and has a good teacher he can learn to be a first-slass plumber in less time than that. A real dirt farmer, however, needs training from the time he is old enough to toddle around after his mother, while she sets hens and chases turkeys, until he is at least 21, and is by law allowed to receive wages for his work.

And he has to love his work, and love the drudgery and love the cows and love the chance to walk about 20 miles a day following a team of horses, and then love a girl so hard that he is brave enough to ask her to step into the harness with him.

This country needs farmers and their wives. The law of supply and demand will soon turn the other way, I fear, and then if the wives of the farmers who have turned plumbers or carpenters refuse to go back to the farm and the uncertainties thereof where will we be then.

When as a farmer's wife she has to see her dollar buy only 50 cents worth from the dry goods man or the implement man, she is ready to quit; but the trouble with most of the farmers' wives is they are so tired out with work, work, work from morning to night that they just can't see anything but their beds, and to save coal oil and matches they often jump into them in the dark.

Business men are taken on tours of the counties and cities and shown business possibilities. I wish I could take a crowd of farmers' wives on a tour of the cities and show them the way they might live if their dollar was as big as some other dollars I know. I really believe they would object to taking the dollar and insist on swapping hours for hours with the wives of men engaged in business not quite as needful as growing the bread and butter of Maryland.

The Value Of Oysters

"Oysters are the greatest American sea crop and our annual harvest of these shellfish amounts to four-fifths of the world's production," said Russell Suter, of the New York Conservation Commission. "In New York State 70,000 acres of land under the waters about Long Island are used for the production of oysters.

"From Cape Cod to the Gulf of Mexico the Atlantic Coast is fringed with sunken valleys into which the waters pour the wastes of our civilization, representing the fertility of half the continent. In the warm waters of these shallow sounds and bays these waste-bearing waters become alive with myriads of microscopic plants and animals, such as oysters.

"As is true with any other crop, oyster farming is dependent for its existence on the seed supply. The eggs of the oyster and the microscopic infant oysters float in the water at the mercy of the inds, waves and current; they then attach themselves in some submerged object and when grown to finger nail size are collected by the oystermen for seed.' Although each adult female oyster produces 1,000,000 eggs in a season, it has been a long time since the natural beds of this state have produced enogh seed to support the industry.
