Report Of Public Health Nurse Shows That Kent's Official Is Doing Good Work

Each month a report has been published, showing the number of visits made by the nurse. This has been in each instance a simple number statement. I have been asked to tell something beyond mere numbers for the many who are interested in the work.

I feel that the nurse in Kent County might be better named community worker, as there are many things to be done which do not strictly come under public health nursing. Yet it is all directly related to matters of health.

The work is varied and might be placed under several different heads. The largest field is preventive work. Here always the effort to instruct the young mother in the daily routine of the new baby, to insure normal growth and health. Next to the baby comes the little ones who are not old enough to go to school, and yet are no longer babies. These children need careful attention to diet and hours of sleep just as much as the baby. Here again I have been called upon to help with suggestions. During this period parents are advised to take these children to their physician for further advice and correction of defects, such as enlarged or diseased tonsils and adenoids. In this way, when these children enter school, they are physically fit, with a properly developed mind to absorb the school work.

This brings me to the school children and school inspection. In the past seven months all the children in the white schools have been inspected, and a report of the defects sent to the parents, asking them to take the child to their family physician for further examination and advice. during the inspection work with each child special emphasis has been placed on care and brushing the teeth, the thing which the child must do himself and so establish right habits.

Every child of a certain height and age should weigh approximately a certain amount. When the child is 10 per cent or more under this weight something is usually wrong. Here the nurses visits can help the mother find out the trouble. Often the family diet is perfectly satisfactory and well-balanced, but the child picks out the things he or she likes and eats only these. Or it may be the child is in such a hurry to get to school, or get out and play, that he doesn't eat enough, or eats too fast what he does eat. This means he is hungry between meals and so fills up on candy and sweets with a resulting indigestion and loss of weight. Diseased tonsils or adenoids or defective teeth, with an absorption of pus going on all the time may account for the underweight condition. Bad tonsils sometimes affect the hearing. Enlarged glands may be a secondary development from the tonsils. The child that is under weight is more susceptible to disease and less able to fight the disease if it does attack him.

The children who do not see well, nor hear well, should have both defects attended to. If not, they are known in school as slow or dull,which is not fair to the child. The child who cannot see properly, or cannot hear headily, hasn't the same chance that the other children have. If by chance the handicapped child does keep up with the others, there is no telling how much better he might do if the handicap were removed.

It is with these handicaps and advice for their correction that my visits were concerned. Often on these visits I learned of the baby and younger children.

Another phase of the work is the care of those who are ill. These calls come from the doctors, relatives or interested friends It was not possible to go and stay in the family for a whole day or night and care for the patient. This would mean nursing care to one person and an accompanying neglect of other work. It can readily be seen that it would be impossible for one nurse to stay with the many who might want her; and it would not be fair to stay with some and not with all. A few times, in cases of emergency, I stayed for a night or a day until help could be secured. These calls came from the doctors, as they had to be the judge of the emergency need. My work was chiefly to show the family how to care for the patient, how the little things can be done to make the patient more comfortable. Besides this I gave treatments ordered by the doctors. When feasable, a member of the family was taught to give these treatments.

At the request of the doctors, several people were taken to clinics for diagnosis, or to hospitals for treatment or operation. Also several parents were visited and arrangements made for children to go to Claiborne Preventorium.

Besides the above, all of which is amount of social service work to do in the county. Some of this was done in co-operation with social agencies in Baltimore and Wilmington. I made several investigations at the request of the Henry Watson Children's Bureau in Wilmington. In addition to this, I made several investigations for the county directly. Some children, for whom the parents were unable to care, were placed in a home and under Henry Watson Children's Aid. Another family will probably need aid in the fall. For these investigation has been started.

Altogether, I spent a busy, interesting seven months in Kent County. No report of the work can be complete without a word of appreciation to the doctors and to the people in the county for their interest, co-operation and help. It was this which made the work possible. I thank you.

LUCY A. BRYDEN.

Girl Drowned At Crumpton

A young Bohemian girl, employed at the cannery in Crumpton, was drowned last Saturday afternoon while bathing in the creek near the plant. The girl, with her sister, had been in the water but a few minutes when she stepped into the channel and began to go down, at the same time making frantic appeals for help. Her sister went ashore for help, but when it was secured the girl had disappeared beneath the surface of the water. The river was immediately dragged and her body located an hour later and brought ashore for burial.

News From Peninsula Towns
