TRIS SPEAKER ONCE TELEPHONE LINEMAN

Tris Speaker is a national figure—everyone who knows anything about our national game knows this great ball player and leader of the Cleveland team of the American League.

Back in 1906, this popular player was a telephone lineman down in Hillsboro, Texas, happy, and contented, pulling down $2.00 a day, with the ambition to get along and eventually become plant chief. His record card, still preserved by the company, shows that he went to work for the Hillsboro Company, September 1, 1906, and in February, 1907, was laid off when work became slack, as he was the last man taken on. It is recorded that he was a good workman and that the telephone company parted with him with regret. Out of a job, Tris devoted himself to baseball in which as an amateur he had made considerable reputation, and the rest is baseball history.

Tris Speaker has enjoyed a deservedly great measure of popularity he is used to the adulation of the crowds and headlines on the sporting pages of the press of the country, but no tribute could surpass that paid to him by one of his old telephone associates of the Hillsboro Telephone Company who said of him: "I remember that Mr. Speaker was always kind and good to his mother."
