Farmers, List Your Repair Needs

It would be hard to find a farmer who at some time or another had not lost valuable time waiting for necessary repair parts. Take this territory and total up the time lost in this way and it will astonish you. And all because repairs are not odered as early as they should be.

There is no better time than right now—just before the busiest season on the farm—to go over your machines carefully, make a list of repairs you are likely to need and send it to us. With this list in our hands, we can order our stock so as to be prepared to meet every call promptly.

Repair part service is a necessary part of our business. We realise what it means to you in time and money to get what you need at once. Help us to help you by making up your list now and sending it in to us.

Bake things he likes with FLAVO FLOUR. It's healthful and tissue building. There is more nutrition and a sweeter taste in FLAVO FLOUR. It is made with a new process by the most modern mill in the world. Nature's food values and the delicious flavor of the wheat are not milled out as they are by other methods. FLAVO FLOUR is milled at home from home wheat. It is good. Buy it and patronize Home Industry.

SPORTS

WASHINGTON PRIMED FOR ST. JOHNS TODAY—BIG FOOTBALL GAME ON WASHINGTON FIELD THANKSGIVING DAY—WHAT DO THE WORDS, "GOOD SPORT" SIGNIFY—WE PICK YALE OVER HARVARD TODAY—A KENT RABBIT HUNTER IS BARRED FROM HUNTING IN THIS COUNTY—W. C. LOSES TO HAVERFORD—ZEV CONQUERS IN MEMORIAM—SOME OTHER SPORTING EVENTS

Washington College vs. St. John's College today at Annapolis. This announcement is enough to cause the blood to pulsate a little faster through the veins of every lover of sport who has the slightest admiration in his being for the great fall sport. Old graduates, as well as the student body, eagerly scan the schedule each year to find out just when this game will take place in order that they may be sure to witness it. With the exception of the years of the war, Washington and St. John's have never failed to meet on the gridiron in many years. And, although, St. John's has usually carried off the honors, it has seldom been without a most sanguinary struggle. And there have been times, too, when Washington has sent the Cadets reeling back to the Severn, shattered and beaten. But in spite of the spirit between the two teams that sends each at the other like whirlwinds, the friendliness of the two institutions is plainly shown in every contest above the keenness of fray. This game is to Washington College and St. John's what the Yale-Harvard game is to these two universities. Washington would be satisfied to lose any two games on the schedule to defeat St. John's the same as Yale and Harvard would be satisfied to lose in order to win from the other. The day promises one of thrills and heartbreaks. Washington, with the finest material ever at the institution, has been going the route in a rather unsatisfactory manner, barely losing many games and, at times, playing larger, more experienced teams well and falling down when meeting teams their weight and size. But Washington always "points" for this game, and when the two teams line up today on the historic gridiron by the Severn, is expected to put forth more energy and display more football than has been shown before this season. St. John's has been picked to beat Washington. This they may do, but Washington will give them one of the hardest battles of the year. We predict that neither team will win by over seven points.

We hear a lot during these days of sports about the "real sport," and this leads us to ask the question, "What is Real Sport?" The real sporting spirit, according to our idea, is to secure decent pleasure, at nobody's expense, for no pay, receiving nothing from it but the joy of the thing itself. The man who goes into the woods with dogs and gun and comes back loaded with so many rabbits he can hardly carry them, says he has had a big day's sport. But he has not. He did not go for that purpose. He went to kill rabbits for the pleasure of enjoying the meat and he has been successful. The man who goes for sport leaves his gun home. When he carries it he goes for rabbits. The same rule applies to birds and every kind of wild life which the law permits to destroy. In sports on the field, such as football and baseball, the same thing applies. Does anyone believe that the baseball players toil beneath the sun's blistering rays, day in and day out, in summer for sport? Hardly. It is the pay they receive which sends them to their tasks. The moment you commercialize sport of any kind by paying the ones who participate a premium of any sort, that very moment you have given that sport a different phase altogether. A comparison between fox hunting and rabbit hunting furnishes a real comparison between what is sport and what is not. The fox hunter protects the life of the quarry and returns home at night tired from the play of the day, and, if his dogs have followed the trail truly he says he has a good day's sport—and he has. Let the average rabbit and bird hunter return empty handed, and, no matter how good the dogs have worked, he will tell you he has had poor sport. And he has! A man has sport in proportion to his realization of what sport is! The man who wants more game than he has use for, is a poor sport; the person who is never satisfied with how the other fellow's dogs have worked, is another poor sport. The man who kills for the pure joy of killing, is the poorest sport of all. Game is always scarce because of the poor sports—and it always will be scare or extinct. The firearm is the worst enemy of game, and, until those who do not know how to use it like a good sport are in some manner restricted, game will gradually diminish until extinction. The good sport is satisfied with little and gets his real sport in being out in the open, beneath the spreading dome, near to the heart of nature. He gets his sport from the minimum of game. When the dogs work poorly he excuses them because he knows they are less than human, and the human, even, is far from perfect and often below the standard of the animal they keep chained to a box. The true sporting spirit is, after all, the spirit of fair play in everything, on the green sward or in the thicket, dealing with the other fellow in the way in which you would want to be dealt with. When we all get the true sporting spirit, life will be happier, game will be plentiful and the sunsets of life will be painted with the ineffaceable pictures of the years that have past.

Yale and Harvard will meet today in the annual football classic of the year. All other games are not considered when these two teams meet in their age-old contest on the gridiron. As as usual thing the two teams approach this contest with records unmarred by defeat, but this year Harvard has been beaten so often and so decisively that there is no question as to their standing in the championship rating. On the other hand, Yale comes to this game unbeaten, with one of the most powerful teams ever assembled beneath her banners. But Mr. Grantland Rice, the great sports writer says, "When Yale and Harvard meet most of the dope that goes before can be thrown away." And, while we agree with him in most things, we hardly can figure Harvard can win this year. Much usually depends upon the breaks, but Yale has shown so much better all-around work, that she looks an almost easy winner. A 20-point margin would not surprise us.

Although Washington College had Haverford 7 to 0 after the first half on last Saturday, Haverford managed to finally win out, 13 to 7. The game was hard fought throughout. As usual Haverford had the breaks, grabbing a fumble and completing a long forward pass right before the end of the game. Washington scored their touchdown in the first half on a pass from Cavanaugh to Carroll. Cavanaugh kicked goal. It looked as if W. C. would score early in the game, when, on a blocked kick by Duffy, they had the ball on Haverford's four-yard line on the first down. However, they were unable to put it over and were held for down. W. C. enthusiasts were much depressed on account of the loss of this game. Reiger and Duffy starred for W. C.

Firpo is complaining, in his own country, of being treated unfairly in the United States. Poor sport, he fails to realize he was counted out in the very first round before he had really laid a glove on Dempsey. When battlefields are far away, gladiators can invent many excuses for defeat.

The Syracuse-Notre Dame football game today should be one of the hardest of the year.

MINUTE TALKS

IN THE INTEREST OF
BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION
OF CHESTERTOWN

By Wm. R. Moody

We have always believed Washington College to be the community's greatest single asset. Entirely aside from the business contacts between town and gown, and they are many, the cultural influences radiating from the seat of learning of the Eastern Shore have affected the community in ways far and beyond anything most of us may have realized. This fact will be brought very forcibly to our attention when the new president, Dr. Paul Emerson Titsworth, will, with all proper ceremony, be installed as head of the College. In anticipation of this important event we have asked Dr. Titsworth to write an article setting forth his views as to just what Washington College stands for in the Eastern Shore communities. He has graciously consented to do so and it will appear elsewhere in this paper.

Bessie Leach Priddy, of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, gives us this thought, "One of the greatest aids to a business organization in its efforts to build up a town would be the effort on the part of the women of the town to receive cordially new women coming in. How would you like to move into a strange community and be looked over critically from head to toe and then perhaps be excluded from the social recognition of 'our crowd?' There is perhaps no one thing that makes life in the smaller places so unpleasant as the tendency of women to clique and to be slow to welcome the new woman.

If you wish for a prosperous co-operative community life you must be cordial to the new woman in your midst.

Again, if you don't admire snobbery, look over your own daughter of high school age and make up your mind whether or not you are on the way to be a mother of a snob. Did you ever stop to think how by our desire to keep our children associated with the most desirable companions we often instill into them a spirit of discrimination that is soon added to by their own observation and that by the time they have arrived at the threshold of social life they are beautifully trained to wound and trample on the feelings of their fellow students? So often, too, the adolescent girl overvalues clothes and popularity and fails to recognize the very much 'worth while' qualities of her quieter companions. And apropos of snobbery one must admit that the female is the greater sinner in this line. If women could but learn how the average man hates a snob and that the man's hatred is intensified in the youth, they would whisper this to their daughters and then we would have the problem solved.

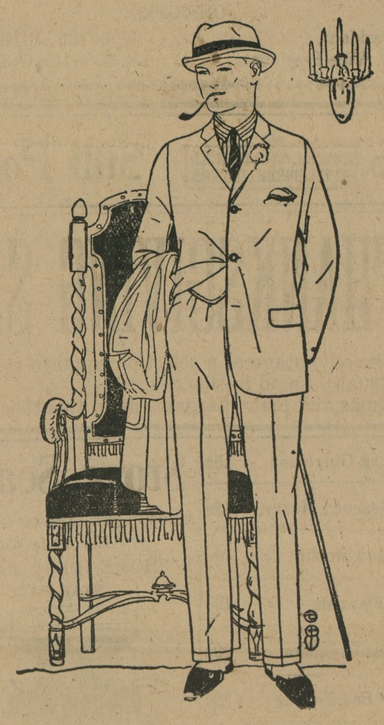

Women who really think outgrow snobbery and it is a rare thing to find an intelligent middle-aged woman prone to this error. The other day an attempt was made in a small town to form a community club and one of the women said, 'Well, we did it and it is working fine—but you know the high school girls almost spoiled the plan for us. They were not a bit nice to the daughters of the laboring mothers.' Think of it for a moment. To scorn the girl whose mother labors for her support and education. Have you counseled with your daughter on the evils of snobbery?"

The National Immigration Conference will open at ten o'clock A. M., on Thursday, December 13th at the Hotel Aster, New York City.

A cordial invitation has been extended to the Business Men's Association to appoint delegates and to call the Conference to the attention of the community at large so that the names of any and all who might think of attending may be sent to the headquarters of the Conference as soon as possible. Immigration in all its phases will occupy the time and attention of the Conference, which will last two days. The meeting is being arranged by the National Industrial Conference Board, 10 East 39 St., New York.
