CHESTERTOWN, MD., - - MARCH 16, 1895.

THE senatorial deadlock in Delaware still continues.

THE dredging season closed yesterday after a poor season.

WHAT MAN will dictate woman's dress now that Worth is dead? Perhaps the new woman can do it now.

THE steamer McLane has been in Chester river the past week assisting the local boat and the dredgers have been kept away.

UNDER the present money standard agriculture has rapidly grown from bad to worse; there has been a steady fall in the prices of agricultural products since 1873, when silver was demonetized.

SENATOR CAMDEN says that "the Lord's prayer couldn't have passed the Senate without amendment." But the Chicago Dispatch suggests that it might easily slip through without being recognized.

A GOOD OBJECT of the Chestertown Cycle Club would be to macadamize the roads about town. The public no doubt would be in sympathy with such a worthy and laudible ambition and do their share.

THE firing on one of our American vessels by a Spanish ship a few days ago, was no doubt unintentional. This act was done once before and if an apology is not forthcoming quickly our navy should understand why.

WORTH, the famous dressmaker, died in Paris Monday, aged 70. He first entered a printing office, but afterwards took up designing and found his best customers in America. The pictures published this week made him look like a baker rather than a dressmaker.

Good Men Required.

The men who are elected to any office in Kent county this year must be conspicuous for their fitness for the place, men who have the confidence of the public and will perform the duties of said offices with credit to themselves and honor to our people and county. The prospect is good for a clean ticket, and if the good thinking voters of Kent will manifest an interest in the primaries such men as they desire—clean and upright—will be the standard bearers on the Democratic ticket. We have men in the party who are competent, pure, clean and upright, and these are the men who should be on the ticket, and will be if all do their duty.

GOVERNOR MARVIL is seriously ill at his home in Laurel with heart trouble, dropsy and shortness of breath. His physician has consulted with Dr. Wm. Pepper, of Philadelphia. The Governor has not been in Dover since last Thursday. To add to the already aggravated case Mr. Marvil's only brother, James Marvil, a prominent farmer, died Tuesday afternoon from paralysis and the Governor's favorite son J. Dallis Marvil, is lying dangerously ill, having been stricken with heart trouble soon after the attack on his father. In the event of the governor's death the State's officers would all be appointed by a Democrat.

THE election of ladies as members of school boards is meeting with favor in not only Baltimore city, but in many counties. In Kent our schools are managed under Examiner Perkins in a most perfect manner, and the advisability of a change has not been agitated. Kent has the finest women in the land and ladies who could fill the position if a change was thought wise.

THE money question will play a conspicuous part in the coming elections. Many good thinking men believe that free silver will solve the question, while other prominent statesmen are earnest advocates of the gold standard.

VALUED TESTIMONIALS.

THE NEW KENT NEWS A BIG SUCCESS.

Congratulations Received from Daily and Weekly Papers—Samples of Those Received from Subscribers.

We wish to return thanks to the fraternity and to our many friends for their kind words of praise and cheering messages of congratulations. Below will be found some opinions as to the improvements, which are appreciated the more because they come to us unsought:

LANKFORD, MD., March 12, 1895.

MESSRS EDITORS.

Gentlemen—I want to congratulate you upon the improvement and convenience of the NEWS. It is almost a new NEWS. I am real glad to see the progress and prosperity of our best county paper. I shall like it better and better as I become used to the changes. It is surely very handy to peruse. I notice such headings as "Sporting and Collegiate" columns &c., but no column specially devoted to agriculture. Now, as most of your readers are farmers or those interested in farming, wouldn't it be a good time to set apart some space devoted to their calling? I always read with interest and profit the discussions of the Still Pond Farmers' Club. With many thanks for your efforts to please and instruct your patrons

I remain very truly yours,
I. R. LEAVERTON.

(Our columns are always open to the farmers. Several columns are devoted this week to their use.—EDS.)

TOLCHESTER, March 11, 1895.

MESSRS. W. B. USILTON & SON.

You have more than redeemed your promise. The NEW KENT NEWS is a beauty—full of news and so convenient to handle. Accept my best wishes for the future. Respectfully,
G. E. NOLAND.

BLACKS, MD., March 11, 1895.

W. B. USILTON & SON.

Gentlemen—I appreciate your change in paper. It shows pluck and energy.
Yours truly,
J. C. SUTTON.

The following is from one of our prominent teachers:

To the NEW KENT NEWS greeting, and to its Editors congratulations. As the cold icy days of winter give place to the glad days of Spring, and all nature bursts forth into new life, so the old has given place to the new NEWS, and we welcome it as a bright harbinger of even greater success to its editors. As we bid farewell to the familiar face of our old friend, it is with pleasure we recall the fact that it came not to its old age with any signs of decline, but full of vigor and energy, which it has undoubtedly bequeathed to its successor. We congratulate the editors of the NEWS upon so marked improvement, and wish for them unlimited success in the future.

Evening Capitol, Annapolis.

The KENT NEWS has made a great change in its appearance which is a decided improvement to that paper. It has not only donned an entirely new suit of types, but it has changed its make up from a folio to a quarto—a much more convenient size for the general reader. We had always looked upon the KENT NEWS as one of the handsomest printed and best conducted of our county exchanges, and didn't think there was much room for improvement, but its present change puts it way ahead of its competitors, and gives it a metropolitan air. It is a newspaper fully up to the times, and is not lacking in anything. We congratulate brothers Usilton upon their improvement and wish them that success their enterprise merits.

Chestertown Enterprise.

We congratulate our neighbor, the News, upon its new appearance. Always bright and newsy, neat and tasty in typographical form and make-up, we predict that its new size and style will add much to its popularity.

Baltimore Sun.

The KENT NEWS, published by Wm. B. Usilton & Son, Chestertown, Md., has taken the new departure and come out in folio form, eight pages, with an entirely new dress of types, printed on a new press, pages cut and pasted and folded on a new folder. This means an entirely new equipment. The change is as radical as that made by the Cecil Whig, to which the KENT NEWS refers as a model typographically. Both papers are very much alike in appearance, though differing very widely in politics. They are both newsy, energetic and prosperous by all signs from which prosperity may be inferred. The KENT NEWS was established in 1841; it has always exerted an influence in the county and the State. It is widely read; it is not addicted to sensationalism; it is respected at home and abroad, and is a wholesome business influence for the community where it is published.

Chestertown Transcript.

Our esteemed contemporary, the KENT NEWS, on Saturday came out in a new form and in an entirely new dress. The NEWS is now one of the most attractive and newsy of Maryland's country journals, and the Transcript extends the warmest congratulations upon this new and progressive step of its neighbor. With new presses, new type and the experience of many years, the Messrs. Usilton have every facility for giving to their patrons a first-class paper.

Cambridge Chronicle.

Since our entrance into the journalitics field some eight years ago the KENT NEWS has always been a favorite exchange. It has occupied for years a position in the vanguard of Maryland journalism. Its local columns have always been attractively filled with the events of the town and county in which it is published, its editorial pages have uttered nothing but correct democratic principles and sound advice on public questions, while its advertising columns have been a faithful index to the business interest of Kent county. This journal has just made another stride forward. In conformity with what seems to be considered as the best form of a modern newspaper, the NEWS has changed from a four page to an eight page paper, thereby enlarging its space for the accommodation of its increasing patronage. In making this alteration a complete new outfit was purchased, including new presses as well as new type. In this shape we shall continue to welcome the NEWS, as of yore in its more familiar style, and regard it as a model of a complete progressive and prosperous rural newspaper.
