Lady doctors are strongly opposed in Austria. The chief medical men of the empire are going to petition Parliament to forbid women to follow a calling which entails far too great a strain on the feminine mind and body. The doctors point out that women are more suited for the profession of a chemist or to agricultural and commercial pursuits.

A scheme is reported on foot for the establishment of an electric railroad line to connect Kansas City, Leavenworth, Atchison and St. Joseph, Mo., the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Trust Company furnishing the funds for the enterprise. A representative of the company is said to have been at work for some time securing the necessary franchise. The line will be 80 miles long.

The trade with the United States amounted to $56,000,000 in imports and $57,800,000 in exports.

The dressing of codfish is an operasion requiring skill and rapidity. A man called the 'throater' cuts the fish's throat and rips it open and passes it to the "header," who removes the head and entrals; the "splitter" then splits e fish open and takes out a part of the ackbone, and the "salter" piles up the sh in tiers in the hold of the boat and alts them.—Philadelphia Record.

A French lady was learning the English language. She had made very good progress, she thought, and one day accepted an invitation to dine with some English friends. As the dinner went on she was offered a dish that was new to her. Not fancying its appearance, she declined it, saying: "Thanks, no. I eat only acquaintances."

Encouragement.

Up! raise thy head, thy muscles brace,
All acts of weakness now despise!
Stand independent of the world,
And only raise to God thine eyes!

What if thy way be now so dark
The destined end thou can'st not see,
It may be that these clouds full soon
Will show the rainbow gloriously!

Thou know'st that he who strives to reach
The highest pinnacle of all,
Must, oft and oft, come short of mark,
And raise himself from many a fall.

And when thou reach the shining height,
And lookest back upon thy way,
The past that seemeth now so dark
May then show brightest in the day.

So independent stand, and strong,
Thou hast a part of that great strength,
Which all the world can overcome,
And even Fate, itself, at length. OTA.

No Use for a Dictionary. — A good story comes from Meeker county, and has to do with a well-known school district. When it came time last summer to hire a teacher the local board discovered that there were two applicants, both young men. As the salary, there was no difference between their bids, but the second one insisted that if he were employed the board should provide a dictionary for the school room.

The first one made no such demand, and said that he would be well able to get along without a dictionary. As he expressed it, it was useful only in the matter of defining words and giving their "pronunciation." Number one got the school. Last week the Board made its first visit to the building. Everything went well for the first fifteen minutes, but finally a red-headed, freckle-faced youth in the rear of the room held up his right hand and snapped his fingers in a very enrgetic manner.

"What is it, Charlie?" asked the teacher.

"I want to know how to pronounce a word," said Charlie.

"Spell it," replied the teacher.

"Charlie in a loud voice, spelled out the word "vocabulary."

"Vo-ca-bull-ary," responded the teacher, placing the accent on the "bull;" and he added, as to its meaning, "appertaining to horned cattle."

The Board cut short its visit, and is now looking for a new teacher and getting ready to buy an unabridged dictionary.

An elderly, amiable Christian, speaking to a party of girls, gave them this little bit of wholesome advice:

"You wonder that nothing seems to annoy me. Some people, you know, have their trouble three time (I used to have)—first in anticipation, next in experiencing the reality, and, lastly, in living it all over again. But I have made up my mind that to have troubles once is enough. I prefer variety, you see. So now I wait till the disaster befalls; and then I think of it as little as possible, unless I can see some way to remedy it, and I forget it as soon as I can. I have found out that it isn't really worth while to be disturbed, especially by an occurrence that cannot be helped. Thus I escape two-thirds the worry that I would otherwise have."

First Silverite—"What a disgrace to Utah the Mormon system was! Here's an account of an elder who had sixteen wives."

Second Silverite—"Sixteen to one? Horrible!"

First Silverite—"Um! Now I consider it again, it doesn't seem so bad, after all."
