FIND OLD ROMAN CALENDAR

Discovery of Immense Historical Interest Recently Made—Antedates That of Julius Caesar.

A most interesting discovery was made recently at Anzio, in the Roman Campagna. It was of a calendar made of plaster and much earlier than the calendar as made by Julius Caesar in the year 46 B. C. This calendar evidently dates back to between 168 B. C. and 84 B. C., and is the only one yet found which antedates that of Julius Caesar.

Some parts of it are missing, but the rest shows that it was based on a lunar year of 353 days divided into twelve months of 29 and 31 days, with a thirteenth month, called intercalary, of 27 days, interposed every alternate year after February. Under this system the year had an average of 366½ days—that is, four days more than a solar year should have.

Inevitable confusion arose from this, and the college of priests had the right to intervene and correct it whenever they chose by omitting the intercalary month. It was because they often did it for political reasons that Julius Caesar decided to reform the calendar and intrusted the work to the celebrated mathematician and astronomer Sosigenes. He based his calendar on the solar year in place of the lunar, and made it one of 365 days.

The year 46 B. C. when this took effect was called the "annus confusionis" (year of confusion), because, in order to make the year 45 begin with the new sun, ninety extra days had to be inserted in the year.

The ancient calendar, unique of its kind, has just been published by the Royal Academy of the Lincei.

FINALLY REACHED THE TOP

Result of Years of Striving on the Part of Bottom of the Strawberry Box.

St. Peter was on his way down to the gates to set them ajar for the day for some people and to slide the bar in place for others. As he passed along the street he spied an object so small, so tiny, so microscopical in appearance that he stopped to gaze on him and inquire how he had come on high without passing the gate in the usual way.

"How did you come to get so high as this?"

"Just naturally. For years and years I've been getting higher and higher, every year, closer to the top all the time, and now I'm this high."

"What are you—a soul?"

"Not at all. I never had a soul and nobody who ever had anything to do with the making of me ever had a soul."

"Well, I certainly do not understand at all how you could get here."

"I admit that I don't exactly belong in any such place as this, but when you know who and what I am you will easily see this, being the highest place I could possibly reach. I simply had to get here in time. I just had to go out of sight so far as the earth is concerned."

"Would you mind telling me who or what you are?"

"I'm the bottom of a strawberry box."

Says World Is Too Busy.

Viscount Kato of Japan is not only a nobleman; he is a philosopher. As evidence of this fact listen to a remark attributed to him by a traveler recently returned from Japan:

"What's the matter, anyhow, with the world?" the traveler asked in the course of a conversation.

"Too many events," said the viscount.

This, we submit, is a rich distillation from oriental thought. Isn't part of the trouble that we are bestirring ourselves too frantically for our own good, and running around in circles, and getting in one another's way, and starting things we can't finish—instead of waiting in patience until Nature asserts itself and the world regains its health?—The Nation's Business.

Color Blindness Can Be Overcome.

Late experience has shown that the color blind may be taught to name ordinary colors correctly, although they may not see colors as others do.

A conductor on the Southern railway was discharged for color blindness, when he began to study colored woolens and plants, and in five weeks passed a rigid color examination without a mistake.

Doctor Brawley has overcome the disadvantage of color blindness in other persons by a like course of color study.—Cleveland News-Leader.
