Helping To Solve Farmers' Problems

The threshing of the present wheat crop is what is worrying all farmers of Kent and Queen Annes counties, due to the scarcity of smooth-running threshing machines in operation. Then, again, the rainy spell of a short time ago has prevented the continuous operation of these machines, with the result that those farmers listed on the tail end of long runs are generally 'left at the post' and their crops are wasted energy.

With the thought in mind of helping the farmers to prevent loss through not being able to get threshing rigs on their farms, C. A. Goodwin has placed at the disposal of the farmers three specially built threshing machines to be operated by three of his Fordson tractors, with a capacity of five to seven hundred bushels a day.

Feeling that every dollar that can be saved to the farmer is a help to this community he has put out these rigs at the low rate of 8 cents per bushel, he supplying all necesary fuel and two men; this in itself is a big saving to the farmers. Another feature of the small threshing rig is that a minimum amount of help is required (nine men and four wagons); this makes it possible to thresh at any time the wheat is fit—without the subsequent lend out of help for an indefinite time.

The machines up to the time we go to press are making a remarkable showing and all who have witnessed their operation are high in their commendation of the Fordson Tractor and the Frick Thresher. The machine is now at Norman P. Massey's farm near Worton is easily averaging 60 to 65 bushels the hour; while the one on Oscar Faucett's farm has averaged 53 to 62 bushels the hour.

Mr. Goodwin suggests that anyone desiring to see the machines in operation should call him on the 'phone and he will advise just where the machines are working. If any farmer has not aranged for threshing it might be well to communicate with Mr. Goodwin on the subject.

W.C. To Have Record Number Students

It is stated by reliable authorities that Washington College will have a record number of students this fall when this famous old institution will begin the next term, and the problem which is confronting the officials of the institution is how to comfortably house them. This will, no doubt, be done before summer fades into autumn.

It is recorded that Gen. George Washington was one of the Board of Visitors of Washington College. He received the degree of doctor of laws and contributed 20 guineas to the support of the college. Further, he gave written consent for the use of his name for the college. It is believed to be the only case on record in which he did so. This was in 1782.

Since then ups and downs have pursued the career of the college. It has fought on, handicapped principally by the want of funds all the years until 1922. On June 17 the indebtedness was $75,000. Today it is $8,000, and under the leadership of John J. Coulbourne, the alumni will clean this out in a few more days.

The act of 1922, Maryland General Assembly, legislated out the old board of visitors and created a new one. There are 24 members, two from each county on the Eastern Shore and six at large. The Governor of Maryland and the alumni each name 12.

One of the "at large" members is H. S. Brown, of Brooklyn, N. Y., an alumnus of the class of 1900, who during the World War was chief of the Finance Division of the Bureau of Aircraft Production, disbursing about $2,000,000,000. He went to France after the war with the Liquidation Commission. Mr. Brown during commncement week was elected president of the Board of Visitors and Governors. He expects the college in the future, he says, to be conducted as a great business enterprise. The students are the raw material upon which the work is to be done and they are to be graduated a finished product.

The increase in enrollment is expected to reach at least 20 per cent and it may be necessary to convert the dining hall into sleeping quarters for the boys.

Near East Relief

It costs only $1.95 a month to feed each child in all the American orphanages in the Caucasus, conducted under the Near East Relief, is the report made to Maryland Headquarters by Mrs. Nettie Hall Austin. Mrs. Austin is an American woman who was a chief yeoman, during the war, in the United States Navy. She prepared the standardized ration schedule under which this low monthly cost is possible. American relief efforts, she says, have saved 68,000 children in the Caucasus alone. They are being trained, Mrs. Austin reports, not only to support themselves when they reach maturity, but also so they will be important factors in the reconstruction of their country in conformity with American ideals.
