GEORGIA'S COMING BIG PEACH CROP.

State Entomologist E. L. Worsham, of Georgia, who has been gathering information from peach growing sections, announces that from present indications there will be an output of more than 5,000 cars. Calculating on the basis of $500 a car, this means that more than $2,500,000 will be derived from the product by the Georgia growers. Mr. Worsham has been making his investigations for the past month. He wrote to officials close to the psach growing industry in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, the only sections that come into competition with Georgia. Texas is the leading competitor, and reports from there are to the effect that the crop has been cut in half. Oklahoma, which is next in importance, as a competitor, is reported as having less than half a crop. The peach crop in Georgia for the past ten years has been as follows; 1898, 2,500 cars; 1899, no crop; 1900, 2,250 cars 1901, 2,000 cars. 1902, 1,800 cars; 1903, 1,000 cars; 1904, 4,500 cars; 1905, 200 cars; 1909, 3,353 cars; 1907, 1,500 cars. Some peaches are being marketed now, but the harvest will not be in full blast before June 15.

CHESTER RIVER STEAMBOAT CO.

"Yes, yes," said Mr. George Warfield, former president of the old Chester River Steamboat Company, "in 1891 the Chester River Steamboat Company ran seven boats during the peach season to the Eastern Shore of Maryland and handled more than 1,000,000 baskets of peaches."

He sighed as one remembering "days that are no more," and added regretfully:

"Railroads across the peninsula broke up all the picturesque steamboat business that had been built up by local men in the interests of Baltimore. It used to be an interesting sight at midnight at the old wharves of the Chester River Steamboat Company to see 40 or 50 colored men lying about the wharf asleep or singing to pass the time and waiting for the fruit boats to come in They usually slipped, like ghosts, to their moorings at about 2 a. m., and then the bustle and activity of unloading the great fruit freight began.

"With the opening of railroads across the peninsula much of this local trade was diverted from Baltimore to Philadelphia."

In the Good Old Days.

The Chester River Steamboat Company was a sort of natural evolution of the old Eastern Shore steamboat lines that plied between Baltimore and Cambridge, Md., in the late forties and in which such gentlemen as Col. James Earle, Mr. Tilghman and others were interested.

Under the familiar name of the old Slaughter Line a route was established to the Eastern Shore by Mr. Henry Slaughter, which included a notable boat called the Arrow, afterward detailed for Government service on the Potomac. Mr. Slaughter also purchased the steamer George Law and built the steamer Chester at Crumpton.

Upon the death of Mr. Slaughter some 0 years ago the Chester River Steamboat Company was organized and took over the two boats, George Law and Chester. The officers of the new organization were Col. B. S. Ford, who, like Pooh Bah, of "Mikado" fame, was president, secretary and treasurer, and a board of directors that included Messrs. James Clark, John K. Hill, B. Thornton and Frank Wright.

The boats of the company ran daily in summer and every other day in winter to Chestertown, Kent Island, Queenstown, Grey's Inn creek, Booker's, Rolph's, Quaker Neck and Crumpton, with the route finally extended to Rock Hall.

The new company sold the steamer Chester, and in 1877 built the B. S. Ford which was burned at Chestertown pier in 1884, and aftrrward rebuilt and continues in service at the present time.

Col. B. S. Ford was drowned at Ocean City, Md., in 1879 and Mr. George Warfield became president of the line, with a board of directors, including Dr. S. E Ford, brother of the former president, and Messrs. Ferdinand C. Latrobe, Osmun Latrobe and Sherlock Swann.

New Ships Launched.

From the beginning the company prospered; in 1883 the Corsica was built a freight steamer and afterward altered to carry passengers as well. The steamer Emma A. Ford was also built and named for the wife of the first president of the company.

In 1889 the line purchased the steamer Gratitude and extended the route to Centreville, Queen Anne's county, through Corsica river. Wharves were built and where the company was possessed at the beginning of its history of two boats and about $15,000 worth of property it closed its commercial career owning four boats and $100,000 worth of real estate. During the busy season additional boats were chartered.

One interesting inheritance received by the Chester River Company from the Slaughter Line was its house flag, which showed a red arrow upon a white field. It was the flag carried at the mast of the steamer Arrow and continued the signal of the Chester River boats as long as the latter company existed.

The Chester River Steamboat Company had its wharves on Light street at the foot of Conway Street, and the company was the first steamboat line in Baltimore to build offices over its docks. In 1884 Mr. Warfield noticed that New York steamboat companies were thus economizing space and in the same year erected a two-story building over his Baltimore docks.

The Company's Captains.

Captains were selected for service upon the route chiefly from sailboat masters who knew the waters of the Chesapeake and tributaries as lads and men, and as a consequence the line was peculiarly free from disasters. The company never lost a member of its crews except two colored men, who fell overboard.

Among the first masters of the Slaughter Line were Capt. Edward S Young and Capt. P. S. McConnor, while Capt. John A. Clark, Capt. Wm. S. Taylor and Capt. Wm. Vandyke were associated with the company after it became the Chester River Steamboat Line.

In 1904, at the height of its prosperity, the Chester River Line was absorbed by the Pennsylvania system and became one of several lines consolidated under the name of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company.—Sun.
