Have You a Summer Stove?

The stifling air of a close kitchen is changed to comfortable coolness by installing a New Perfection Wick Blue Flame Oil Cook-Stove to do the family cooking. No kitchen furnishing is so convenient as this stove. Gives a working heat at once, and maintains it until turned out—that too, without overheating the room. If you examine the

you will see why this is so. The heat from the chimney of the "New Perfection" is concentrated under the grate and not dissipated through the room by radiation. Thus it does the work of the coal range without its discomfort. Ask your dealer about this stove—if not with him, write our nearest agency.

The Rayo Lamp is a very handsome piece of furniture. It gives a clear, powerful light more agreeable than gas or electricity. Safe everywhere and always. Made of brass finely nickel plated—just the thing for the living-room. If not with your dealer, write our nearest agency.

A CARD OF APPRECIATION.

In retiring from business, which my falling sight compels, I wish to return my grateful thanks to the many friends and patrons who have stood by me so faithfully and some of them by my father before me. It is with much feeling and great regret that I have faced the inevitable and given up the business I have engaged in so long, and in which I have achieved a reputation that any one may well envy.

Again thinking all my friends I desire to recommend my successor, Mr. CHARLES L. DODD, to their liberal patronage, feeling sure of his ability to conduct the business in the most acceptable manner.

JOHN N. DODD, Respectfully

No Humberg No humbug claims have to be made for Foley's Honey and Tar, the well-known remedy for coughs, colds and lung troubles. The fact that more bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar are used than of any other cough remedy is the best testimony of its great merit. Why then risk taking some unknown preparation when Foley's Honey and Tar costs you no more and is safe and sure. For sale by all druggists.

Jean Griffith looked about her curiously. The street was at once familiar and strange, like an old friend encountered after years of separation. Five years had passed since Jean's father had moved out west—five years of mingled pain and pleasure—and this was her first return visit.

She was stopping at a downtown hotel and had come uptown to call on some of the girls she knew to be still living in the old neighborhood.

The altered aspect of the street perplexed her. She had grumbled all the time she was talking about it. It had been an absurd quarrel. She had wanted to live in the city, and Tom had set his heart upon the purchase of a little home in the country.

They had been walking down that very street one afternoon, and she had insisted upon inspecting the apartments in a house just being completed. Tom had protested that it was useless to look at flats when they wanted a country home, and though Jean had her way, Tom had grumbled all the time they were being shown through the rooms.

As they had stood on the steps after the caretaker had left them Jean had declared her intention of living in one of the corner apartments, and Tom had turned stiffly away with the declaration that it was apparent they never could agree.

With her head held high, she had watched him go down the street, but when he had turned the corner she had hurried home to wash out in tears her pain and indignation.

A few weeks later she had moved away, and Tom, his anger slowly cooling, had found out too late what that going meant to him. He had written,

"Do you know," she went on, "that when I got off the car a couple of hours ago it was like stepping into the past and taking up life where I left it five years back? Of course lots of things have changed, but it all seems so good. It's like coming back from a journey, and realizing that you are at home again."

"And this is going to be home to us," said Tom tenderly. "We will forget the five years and pretend we haven't gone downstairs that first time yet."

"No," Jean shook her head with energy. "We will profit by experience and not quarrel this time."

"Quarrel?" asked Tom. "I should say not. Once is more than enough for me. Fate has given me another chance, but there never would be a third. I've got you, dear, and I'm going to keep you for life."

How Walls Breathe. Looking up at the ceiling of a room which is whitewashed or calcimined dark streaks can frequently be detected, which at first glance seem to correspond with the shape of the laths overhead. These streaks are so faint oftentimes that they cannot be detected unless against a light background.

Instead of revealing the shape of the laths, as most people would at first suppose, the streak outlines the space between the laths, and this is the explanation—walls breathe. Through a newly plastered wall without decoration or covering of any kind pass eight cubic feet of air for each square yard of wall surface per hour. This naturally creates a slight suction, and the air in passing between the laths draws with it fine particles of dust which are responsible for the dark stripes across the ceiling. The same breathing goes on through the side walls, but these dark stripes are not noticed there for the reason that the greatest suction seems always to be upward.—Baltimore Sun.

Good He Didn't Accept. During the second Dreyfus court martial, Dr. Beauregard, Dr. Beauregard, ex-president of the civil section of the court de cassation, who was bitter against the accused captain, received a very polite letter dated from the Chateau de Prefargier, near Neuchatel, in Switzerland, and signed "A de Prefargier," praising him for his efforts in the Dreyfus case and inviting him to come and stay at the writer's residence.

M. de Beauregard replied in his usual flowery style, saying he would continue the struggle as long as he had strength and that he would remain at the breach like a valiant soldier to set an example of duty even should he stand alone. He did not positively decline the invitation, holding out hopes that some day he might be free to accept it.

The Chateau de Prefargier is the lunatic asylum for Neuchatel.

A Dog Story by Pepsy. The following story of a dog of the restoration has been taken from the veracious Pepsy under the date of Sept. 11, 1901: "To Dr. Williams, who did carry me into his garden, where he hath abundance of grapes; and he did show me how a dog that he hath to kill all the cats that come hither to kill his pigeons, and do afterward bury them; and do it with so much care that they shall be quite covered, that if the tip of the tail hangs out he will take up the cat again, and dig the hole deeper. Which is very strange; and he tells me that he do believe that he hath killed above a hundred cats."
