GOVERNOR LIKES HIS JOB.

"How do you like your work as governor?" asked a reporter one morning this week.

"All right," said Governor Crothers. "I find that it keeps me busy. Sometimes I think there is enough work for two governors. While I like the work, I must say my preference has always been for public life along the lines of my profession. I sought the office of State's attorney in Cecil county because its duties were wholly legal; I went to the State Senate because my work at Annapolis did not seriously conflict with the practise of my profession; I was still within the lines of my profession when I accepted appointment on the bench."

"When you declined to be a candidate for a full term on the bench, did you intend to be a candidate for governor?"

"I did not have the slighest idea at that time that I would even be suggested as a candidate for governor. I determined to leave the bench and resume the practise of law because I would rather practise law than be a judge."

"Have you laid aside the practice of law since you became governor?"

"Almost entirely."

"What are you going to do after your term as governor expires?"

"I am going back to Elkton on the first train and take up the practice of law, and I am going to take only such cases as I like."

A "reactionary storm period" extends from the 22d to the 25th.
