"BUT"

"But" is the word of the waverer—the one who thinks there may be finer fruit across the hedge, or a little farther along the way, and passes by the best—even the good—to where the inferior is, after which there is nothing.

"But"—used as it generally is—keeps out new ways of doing things, stifles ambition, brings narrowness of mind and petty methods of living.

Use the word this way, and see how it will help you—

But there is no store so good as Hochschild, Kohn & Co.'s, and I will be unwise to go anywhere else.

But I can't buy such pretty, fashionable things at any other store as I can get at Hochschild, Kohn & Co.'s. The other stores don't have them.

But I have never met such willing, courteous salespeople as I find at Hochschild, Kohn & Co.'s. It is a real pleasure to shop there.

But I want to save money, and I can do it by going to Hochschild, Kohn & Co.'s.

But Hochschild, Kohn & Co. give your money back if you want it.

Cause of Lockjaw.

Lockjaw, or tetanus, is caused by a bacillus or germ which exists plentifully in street dirt. It is inactive so long as exposed to the air, but when carried beneath the skin, as in the wounds caused by percussion caps or by rusty nails, and when the air is excluded the germ is roused to activity and produces the most virulent poison known. These germs may be destroyed and all danger of lockjaw avoided by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm freely as soon as the injury is received. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and causes cuts, bruises and like injuries to heal without maturation and in one third the time required by the usual threatment. It is for sale by M. A. Toulson, Druggist, Chestetown, Md.

THE CO-OPERATION OF THE PRESS WITH THE WORK OF THE W. C. T. U.

Valuable Paper Read by Mrs. S. A. Hurlock at the Convention Last Week.

Anything from the pen of Mrs. S. A. Hurlock is always appreciated by the reading public and the press is deeply appreciative of the following compliment paid us by Mrs. Hurlock in this splendid article:

In making a report of press work I realize how helpful has been the work of the unions in giving directly to the press news of their work; also the kindness of our local editors in keeping in touch with it and reporting when it would otherwise have been neglected. This has been duly appreciated because of the affliction that has made writing a burden and compelled me to resort more to clippings for items along our line. In this I have come to reliaze more the power and possibilities of the press. If it has been a year of less personal work, it has been one the greater study of the question, of its opportunities and responsibilities. These are days when the pulpit and press are regarded as the two great educators and any reform must come from them through the advocating of practical methods for its advancment. We have seen that mere expression of sentiment, while it has its mission is outstripped in results when applied to practical work for demonstration. Since unfortunately the Sunday newspaper has largely taken the place of the Sunday sermon, how important the character reading introduced into the home on the sacred day set apart for the needs of man. It is cheering that many papers carry each Sunday valuable sermons to those unable to hear them from the pulpit and in that way assist the church in spreading gospel.

Now that our young people graduate so early from the Sunday school, it seems to fall to the press to extend its work also, and we see evidences that it feels its responsibility in the many interesting explanations of the Sunday school lessons in newspapers that can not fail to catch the eye of the reader. That this is a hopeful sign is not less true than that the press caters to public sentiment as well as moulds it and jealously guards its own interests and success. It is stated that where one man reads a book, about 5 read a newspaper; so it is to them we look most for reformatory work. It is from them we learn of progress in the temperance cause. The record in many states is, that the difficulty in enforcing laws is becoming less; that the attitude of the courts toward the saloon-keeper has changed so that it is no longer harder to convict one, than to administer the death penalty for a capital offence. These same people also tell us, that in this, the courts must be sustained by the people. Upon them the burden finally falls. Blessed mission of the press that doth the gift to give us, to see ourselves as others see us, and help from many a blunder free us. Blessed the mission of leading periodicals that have proved to the world their prosperity, while refusing all advertisements of liquors and other objectionable matter. But for the press, how could we learn the attitude of the National Editorial Association, the International League of Press Clubs, Pan Presbyterian Council, several assemblies, synod and conferences. We have learned the decisive measures of the late General M. E. Conference and the sending of temperance evangelists into the field. In the organ of the M. P. Church this question is asked: "If the church members and the Christian Endeavorers in particular are to lose interest in the temperance movement, who is there to take their place?" With the adjournment of the last great C. E Convention at Washington, the department of Christian citizenship began its active career. It means carrying Christ into the world of civil as well as religious offices; and the cause of temperance is recognized as worthy of its great affort. The press is the means of heralding the rapid strides being made in the medical profession toward banishment of alcohol in the treatment of diseases, another blessed mission to suffering humanity.

In considering the subject before us, the co-operation of temperance forces, we must narrow down to local work with opportunities at hand, calling to mind the daily journals with so much of the tragic in life confronting us on nearly every page, do we ever count the cost as being far more than the penny invested and time worse than wasted in reading it? Do we realize the danger to members of our families who may be morbidly sensitive to human suffering or intensely interested in details of crime? Are we mindful of the dangers to the young and careful to supply reading of cheerful and uplifting character? A reform in this, would create a need of change in the current papers to meet the demand of the times. One of our county papers gives weekly the International Sunday School lesson and often lengthy articles on temperance and other reformatory work. My personal experience with our local editors has proven a willingness to give space to temperance and other elevating topics, and as a means of co-operation along press lines. I will ask not only the Unions to continue to send items of interest, but that all socities will keep the public informed of their work. While not having room for entire sermons, I am sure that extracts from them will be welcomed by our local editors. A writer says preachers need to study practical methods. For the many forcible points and beautiful thoughts contained in sermons I would urge this method of further reaching and convincing the people, assured that in all that helps heavenward our local press will stand with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.
