Picked With a Purpose.

"Did you ever notice," asked the hotel clerk yesterday, "how many men there are who make it their business to pick little things, such as threads and specks, off your clothes while standing talking to you? Well, sir, there are lots of them, and that picking is a habit with them. They do it unconsciously. No matter how well brushed you are the man with the habit will begin picking at you when he meets you."

"I've noticed them many a time," said a traveling man standing near, "but I have quit letting them pick at my clothes. I once had an experience with one of those fellows that wasn't pleasant, I had known him slightly and chanced to meet him on the street one day. He began picking specks of dirt and such things from my coat, and he kept it up all the time we talked. A couple of minutes after he had left I missed a $200 diamond pin. That cured me of letting people pick things off my clothes. Nowadays I simply ask the man who tries it to desist. If necessary I hold his hands."—Kansas City Times.

Their First Experience.

A day or two ago a Brooklyn clergyman received an evening call from an elderly man and woman, who expressed a wish to be joined in the bonds of matrimony as quickly as possible.

"Have you ever been married before?" asked the clergyman of the man, a good natured, weather beaten person of seafaring aspect.

"Never, and never wanted to be before," was the prompt reply.

"And have you ever been married before?" the question came to the woman.

"No, sir," she replied with equal promptness. And with a touch of humor that appealed to the clergyman at once she added, "I never had a chance."

The marriage ceremony was speedily performed, and the clergyman refused to take any fee, telling the bride, with a twinkle in his eye, that it had been an unusual privilege to officiate.—New York Press.

The Sea Wolf.

A sea wolf caught by salmon fishers of the Esk in Montrose, Scotland, is described as follows: "Its mouth measured seventeen and one-half inches across and when fully opened the circumference was fifty-two inches. The lungs were like a white parasol cut in two. In the middle of the fish were two 'paws' remarkably like hands, the five fingers being attached by a fine membrane. The sea wolf's habit is to lie at the bottom of the water, with open mouth, manipulating two codlike flappers to attract its prey. These flappers are fixed over its head. On being cut open the wolf's stomach was found to contain a sea gull, which had been swallowed whole. As soon as the bird was removed the spectators were even more astonished to find a big eel, which was still alive."

An Extra Pair of Lungs.

"I have known aged people, men past eighty, to take their cold baths every morning and be as spry as you please," says Eugene Wood in Everybody's Magazine. "One old fellow used to toddle down to the beach when he had to wade bare legged through the snow two or three blocks. It carried him off at the last, though, for he died just about four weeks before he was eighty-four. And if those of low vitality who ought 'to take the chill off the bath' were to take it ice cold and rub themselves like sixty afterward I don't think their vitality would be low. I think if they got their blood purified by practically adding another pair of lungs to their outfit they would soon be as chipper as anybody."

Two Passengers.

A negro hack driver in Washington was driving along the street when he encountered a funeral. A long line of coaches was behind the hearse, which was moving along at a lively rate. The negro was superstitious and did not want to cross between the carriages in the funeral procession. He tried to drive around in front of the hearse, but could not make sufficient speed. After driving alongside the hearse for two blocks the negro called out to the driver: "Say, boss, hold up an' let me go past. My passenger is in a hurry and yours isn't."

Dance Auction Day.

A custom that has existed for some centuries is still maintained in certain towns on the lower Rhine. Early in the year—on auction day—the town crier or clerk calls all the young people together and, having chosen attractive maidens, sells to the highest bidders the privilege of dancing with them, and them only, during the entire year. The fees go into the public poor box.

How She Acted.

Holden—When you asked her to marry you did she hide her face on your shoulder and whisper "Yes?" Tilden—On the contrary, she looked me square in the face and remarked, "Not on your life!" Somehow I got the impression that she wouldn't have me.—Boston Transcript.

Hard Luck.

Mrs. Jones—It's strange that a strong man like you cannot get work. The Tramp—Well, yer see, mum, people wants references from me last employer, an' he's been dead twenty years.

The Easy End.

"How do you make out that you came off better than your accomplice when you were convicted and he acquitted?"

"Because I had only to pay the fine, while he had to pay the lawyer."

There is always hope in a man that actually and honestly works.—Carlyle.

The Day of the Doer.

Time was when "Has Been" was accepted and respected for the sake of what he had done. Not so today.

"Am Now" has introduced himself and is the lion of the hour.

No one cares what has been done. The world is too busy keeping in touch with the "Doer" to bother about the "Done."

Maybe you composed an opera yesterday. No one cares. What are you composing now?

You tell us that your last year's picture was the success of the day. Yes, of that day, but that day is gone. What are you painting now?

Nor does the world care for promise. It accepts not the bud, but the blossom.

The "Will Be" is no more welcome among the world's workers than is the "Has Been."

You may be about to sing a beautiful melody which promises to ring down the ages. Nobody cares. Sing it. The world cannot afford to think about unsung melodies.

The world has room for the "Doer" only; the "Nower" is the rage.

This is an age of "Do, we must be shown."

It is an age of now, an age of today. It recognizes no yesterday. There is no tomorrow.—New York World.

Keeping Up Your Courage.

There is first the belief that we are well and capable of continuing so. That is nothing more than faith in our own human powers. It is a faith that every self respecting person should have. Do not abuse the organs of the body, and then there will be no necessity of thinking of them and wondering if they are working all right. By dwelling too much upon some weakness we can always aggravate it through nervous reaction. This in some cases can become such a confirmed habit that serious troubles will be induced. There are many patients in the world today who might be up and around, enjoying good health, if they but willed that they should do so. They are invalids through lack of force of character, for will makes character of one sort or another.—Household Ledger.

A Victim of Small Beer.

A correspondent sends to the London Public Opinion the following quaint epitaph on what is known as "Thetcher's Stone" at Winchester, England: "In memory of Thomas Thetcher, a grenadier in the North regiment of Hants militia, who died of violent fever contracted by drinking small beer when hot the 12th of May, 1764, aged twenty-six years. In grateful remembrance of whose universal good will toward his comrades this stone is placed here at their expense, as a small testimony of their regard and concern.

"Here sleeps in peace a Hampshire grenadier
Who caught his death by drinking cold small beer.
Soldiers, be wise from his untimely fall
And when you're hot drink strong or none at all.

"An honest soldier never is forgot,
Whether he die by musket or by pot."

The Sikh's Five K's.

General Gordon, a British officer who has written a book on the Sikhs, the celebrated fighters of India, says that the signs by which you may know a Sikh are these: He never cuts his hair, but wears his beard looped up over his ears; he never smokes nor touches tobacco, because that is the privilege of the Mohammedan, but he is allowed to drink spirits and is a great consumer of opium. Finally, he must have about his person the five K's, which General Gordon thus enumerates: Kes, long hair of the head, as the Sikh must never cut his hair or beard; kangi, comb to secure the hair tied up in a knot on top of the head; kaceh, breeches reaching to the knee; kard, knife, and kirpan, sword.

The Bird's Superior Eye.

The sight of birds is extraordinary, and the simple fact that the eye of a hawk and a pigeon is larger than their whole brain gives some idea of what their powers of sight must be and of how easily they can fly hundreds of miles if they have marks to guide them. Very little attention has yet been given by eye surgeons to the eye of the bird and other animals, from which so much is to be learned.—London Mail.

Soda and Magnesia Lakes.

The soda and magnesia lakes of Wyoming are estimated to cover an area of 1,028 acres. They are found in Albany and Carbon counties and represent the beds of natural basins now nearly dry. The lakes containing sodium sulphate have an area of 708 acres, with an average depth of about five feet, which means a holding of 4,900,000 tons of soda.

Looking Ahead.

The Senior Partner—I don't see how you can charge the money you've spent on that impecunious young fellow up as business expenses. The Young Lawyer—That's simple enough. He has a rich uncle that is sick, and there's going to be a lovely contest over his will.

Pretty Solemn.

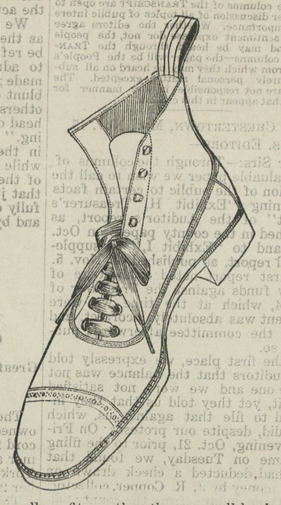

Father (who has been called upon in the city and asked for his daughter's hand)—Louise, do you know what a solemn thing it is to be married? Louise—Oh, yes, pa, but it is a good deal more solemn being single.—Judy.

The Next Train.

Traveler—When is the next train out? Station Master—Twelve o'clock, sir. Traveler—What! Isn't there one before that? Station Master—No, sir; we never run one before the next.

No man ever yet got his sidewalk shoveled off by sitting down and pondering the depth of last year's snow.—Boston Globe.

How About Shoes?
