Mr. James Rolph, a farmer residing near town, met with an accident which causes him to loose a great deal of time from his farm work and to suffer a great deal of pain. Mr. Rolph resides on the farm owned by Dr. Thomas H. McWhorter, of Philadelphia. A couple of weeks ago he went to Philadelphia on business, and in crossing a street was struck by a trolley car. The fender picked him up and carried him some distance before the car could be stopped, and when he was lifted from the fender it was found the small bone in his right leg was broken. He was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital where he remained several days. He returned to his home last week walking on crutches with his leg in a plaster cast. Had it not been for the fender catching him, he would have been killed. Misfortune seems to follow him, for only last May all the buildings on the farm where he still lives were destroyed by fire, every article of furniture, clothing and farming implement was burned.
