"Clean out that strainer in your vacuum tank"

A CAR had just been towed in. It took the Fleet Boss only a moment, with his long, practical experience, to find the trouble. Motor would gradually die down and stop. If they waited a minute it would run again, but only for a few seconds. Most every driver has to have it clog up once with dirt to know there is a vacuum tank strainer in his "gas" line. Experience locates the unusual things, as well as the obvious.

Long years of refining and study have shown us a thousand and one practical things about motor oils that couldn't be learned in any other way. You give your motor the benefit of it when you use Polarine regularly. The reasonably-priced, quality oil, developed by experience to meet all requirements.

Trust this live experience!

Say "Polarine" —not just "a quart of oil"

THIRD CORPS TEAM OUTCLASSES RIVAL

Army Eleven Defeats Washington College On Stadium Gridiron.

The Third Corps Area eleven simply outclassed the lighter Washington College team and plunged and passed its way to a 27-to-0 victory Saturday afternoon at Baltimore Stadium in the opening game of the local gridiron season. The driving power and cohesion of the Soldier line opened up gaps for the fleet and shifty Noyes and Hahn, and effectually smothered every ground attack launched by the Eastern Shoremen.

Washington was able to gather only two first downs during the entire proceedings, and both were the result of forward passes by Cavanaugh to Reiger, his stocky little end. Reiger, by the way, was one of the oustanding stars of a conflict that produced little of notable import outside of the relentless and monotonous hammering of the Doughboy attack, the game but losing battling of the Collegians and an occasional spectacular feat by Noys, Hahn and Reiger.

Beginning five minutes after the initial kickoff, the Third Corps managed to score in every period and would have crossed the goal line at least on one other occasion had one or two of the forward, notably big Daly, been content merely to continue rushing the lighter opposing line off its feet, instead of incurring costly penalties through holding.

Washington got within the Army's 35-yard line twice, once having possession of the oval on the Third Corps' 15-yard line. The Maroon and Black's closest approach to a score came toward the middle of the last period. Cavanaugh intercepted one of Noyes' aeriols on Washington's 40-yard line. After two forwards had grounded Cavanaugh finally got off a 35-yard toss to Reiger. A moment later the Soldiers were interfered with a Washington receiver and it was the Collegians' ball on the Third Corps' 15-yard line, Cavanaugh then made a pretty toss to Conant, who had substituted for Carroll at right end, but the intended receiver, with no one within three yards of him, permitted the ball to ground in the end for a touchback.

COTTON

The following is a composition written by Nancy Jean Usilton, of the Chestertown Fifth Grade Grammar School. Teacher Miss Edith Harley. It is published at the teacher's request as being one of the best in the class:

In Maryland the farmers say they are preparing the seed land. In Georgia the farmers say they are bedding up the cotton lands.

The farmers have a one-horse plow. He takes that and throws the earth one way and throws the earth on top of the other.

They take a smaller plow and run up the middle of the mound or bed, then they sow the seed and cover it up with a board.

It takes one boy, two men and two horses to plant cotton.

In eight or ten days it is up two or three inches. They thin them down with a sharp hoe, one to two plants in a hill about eighteen inches apart. It grows knee high. The cotton is usually planted in April.

At the top of the cotton there comes a little square which is really a triangle.

When this bursts open out comes a light cream colored blossom, which turns deep cream and then pink. This falls off and a little ball comes in its place the shape of an English walnut. This has three, four or five parts. This opens and you see the cotton. No successful machine has been invented for picking cotton yet. They pick all the cotton by hand. The pickers put it in a bag on his side and then puts it in a basket. In the evening they take the baskets to the gin house and weigh them. The pickers receive 50 cents a hundred for picking the cotton. The farmer takes the cotton to the gin house and has the seed separated from the cotton and puts it in bales.

The boll weavel has been so bad this year that the farms yield about one bale to thirty acres. The boll weavel gets in the blossom and kills it. Every blossom that they kill does not grow cotton. The farmers put poison on the cotton to kill the weavel. The negroes who work on the cotton farms have gone North to work because they couldn't make enough to live on.

At present cotton runs from 23 to 25 cents a pound which amounts to about $125 a bale.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister, Annie Berryman, nee Shreck, who departed this life five years ago October 12th, 1918.

Nobody knows my longing,
But few have seen us weep;
We shed our tears from an aching heart
While others are fast asleep.

Surrounded by friends, we are lonesome;
In the midst of pleasure we're blue;
A smile on our face and an aching heart—
We always think of you.
By her devoted Mother and Father.

When the evening shades are gathering,
And we are sitting all alone,
In our heart there comes a longing
If you only could come home.

Some time, some day, our eyes shall see
The face we loved so well;
Some day her hand shall clasp in ours and never say farewell.
By brothers, Willie, Alvin, Millard.

As we gather in our old home,
We'll feel so lonesome there.
No, dear sister, to greet us,
Nothing but her vacant chair.

Often we wander to the grave yard,
Flowers we plant with loving care;
For we know the one that loved us,
Annie, dear, is sleeping there.
By loving sisters, Myrtle and Yula.

From this world of pain and sorrow,
To the land of peace and rest,
God has taken you, dear Aunt Annie
Where you have found eternal rest.
By her little niece, Mildred.

In loving memory of our dear father, Henry J. Gray, who died Oct. 14th, 1922.

Soft and bright the stars are shining
In a sad and lonely grave
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
Whom we tried but could not save,
There is a link death cannot sever,
Love and remembrance live forever.
Daughter, Lottie.

New Sedan

Changes featured in the new Ford Sedan make it a better looking, roomier car.

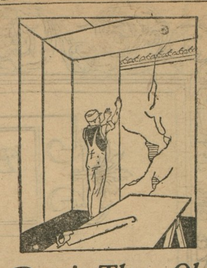

A higher radiator with a trim apron at its base lends dignity befitting a closed car. The higher hood and enlarged cowl curving gracefully to the dash give a stylish sweep to its body lines, and afford additional leg room for occupants of the front seat.

All body fittings—window regulators, door grips, door latch levers, door lock, dome light—are finished in nickel. The upholstery carries a fine dark line on a soft brown background that does not easily show dust or dirt. Silk window curtains to harmonize for the three rear windows enhance the style of the car and add to the comfort of its passengers. See the new Sedan and other new Ford body styles at our showroom
