BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT AND THE CHURCHES

Rev. Dr. Charles S. Macfarland, Field Scout Commissioner.

The war has raised anew the whole question of the education and development of our boys, physically, morally and spiritually. It is a problem and an opportunity above all for our churches.

Today, as never before, the nation has begun to realize the potentiality of its boyhood. Pertinent indeed is the question what will be the effect of this when, in a few years, it become dynamic? One instinctively wonders whether the boys of this day are being properly prepared for the unparrelled responsibilities so soon to be theirs.

We feel the need of providing our boys with a training that will give them physical preparedness for the service of the nation without running the danger of imbuing them with the spirit of militarism. The Boy Scout Movement meets this need of the hour.

Of all the many good movements engaged in the arduous task of boy training, there is, perhaps, none quite like the Boy Scouts of America. This movement has mapped out a thoroughly feasible plan, practical in every application, whereby boys will be inspired with a real desire to become good Christian citizens. The Scouting program offers the boy a host of wholesome activities in which he, as a natural boy, is intensely interested. It stresses particularly life in the open-woodcraft, camping hiking and other pursuits, whose enjoyment requires an intelligent acquaintance with nature. A Scout does not take these things in a haphazard fashion; he soon grows to look upon nature as the handiwork of God and derives untold inspiration from it, when rightly guided.

An outdoor life, led wisely, gives rise to many good works. The ideal of service to others stands out prominently in the Scouting program before a boy can officially become a Scout, he promises

"On my honor I will do my best—

"1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout Law.

"2. To help other people at all times.

"3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

Such an influence as this brings out the best in any community. The boy takes pride in himself and, as a natural consequence, in his environment. He straightway sets out to better the conditions which he finds round about him. Clean-up, safety first, health and other similar drives have been pushed to a successful conclusion by Boy Scouts in numerous cities and towns. Scouts tackle these things, not as matters of necessary routine, but with a spontaneity and enthusiasm that inevitably brings results.

The plea of those who have this Movement nearest at heart is not so much for boys—it is for leadership for the many boys who are eager to become Scouts. The need for Scoutmasters was never so urgent as it is now, at the dawn of a vertiable new era. If Scouting is to expand until it becomes a factor in the development of the American youth, leaders of the highest calibre must step forward.

The church is the obvious place to turn for such leadership, and the church need have no fear that it is expanding its energies in the wrong direction.

It is clearly incumbent upon the churches of America to answer the appeal now being made by Scouting officials for Christian leadership. It is an opportunity for the churches to make their influence felt in a tangible way.

Many churches, to be sure, have already incorporated Scouting in their regular activities.

There is, however, room for a much wider support of Scouting on the part of the churches. If the citizen of tomorrow is to be leader in the church, the church must not fail him now. In furnishing the right sort of leadership to the Boy Scouts of America, the church will fulfill a great trust.

I urgently advise our pastors to make a thorough and immediate study of the Boy Scout Movement in conjunction with the work of their churches, not only on account of the wonderful record of the Boy Scout Movement, but also to interest the churches in providing Christian leadership with a live, successful program for their boys.

The Modern Funeral

The methods and system in vogue a few years ago and still adhered to by many are no longer applicable in this age and generation.

A better understanding of the duties of the funeral director has changed the old order.

One of the most difficult problems confronting the modern funeral director, will be solved when the public realizes that SERVICE is the principle and only commodity which we have to offer.

The casket and funeral appertances are negligible or practically so, requiring little or no experience and in the matter of expense consistent with the cost of production.

SERVICE is the main consideration, the care and disposition of the body of the one who has past on knowledge and ability, a readiness to relieve the burdens of the ones who are left to mourn.

The principal reason for Embalming are: (1) Sanitation, for it is an absolute prevention of communication by infection. (2) The restoration of color and form.

Embalming is not as generally supposed, a lost art. The modern embalmer is a thoroughly trained sanitarian, a student of anatomy and chemistry. In his work he employs none of the crude and laborous methods used by the ancient Egyptians.
