HAND OF DEATH

I. R. Leaverton died at his home near Chestertown early Thursday morning of acute indigestion aged 83 years, 9 months and 20 days. He was about the farm Wednesday and enjoyed the annual hog-killing but was complaining of not feeling well. He went to bed and passed away to his reward. The deceased was a remarkable man in many respects. His industry and ambition were marked while his right principles and sympathy for worthy needs were traits of his whole life. He loved his church and was one of the pillars in old Hynson's Chapel, then at Bond Chapel and in recent years of the Chestertown M. E. Church. In politics he was a Republican and took an active interest in county, State and National affairs. He was well read and could give a reason for his faith and his opinion on all subjects without equivocation. Of him it can well be said:

Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

The deceased leaves the following children: Anna L., Miriam M., and Richard C., of Kent, and C. Clifton Leaverton, of New York. He leaves a brother, Enos, of Georgetown, Mass.; two sisters, Mrs. M. A. L. Stevens, of Baltimore, Mrs. Leah B. Victor, of Indiana.

The funeral will take place this Saturday at 11 a. m., interment in Chester Cemetery, Revs. Omar Jones and T. J. Sard officiating; bearers, A. H. Covey, John C. Davis, W. B. Copper, H. F. Jefferson, Walter and James Walbert; C. L. Dodd, undertaker.

Rev. George R. Ellis died in Millsboro Friday night after an illness of six months, aged 62. He joined the Wilmington M. E. Conference in 1898 and since that time has served many appointments: He was at Worton, Md., 1898-1902. Besides the wife, who was Miss Matthews, of Worton, he is survived by two children, Ira Ellis, a student at the University of Delaware, and Miss Elizabeth Ellis. About thirty-five years ago, Rev. Mr. Ellis was associated in business with the late J. J. Boyce, of Philadelphia, in the Lacey Building, Corner Market and South Race streets, Georgetown.

Lizzie Ringgold, colored, died at her home near Chestertown, on Wednesday. She has been in the Baker-Covey family for 35 years and a more faithful and loyal employe could not be found. She was the wife of Alfred Ringgold who has also been the trusted employe of this family for years.

CHRISTMAS

How shall we come to the Christmas of 1923? Shall it be with despair in our hearts of the final triumph of good over evil, or dare we, despite the voices of the present and the dark fears for the future, declare our faith in the words of Browning's innocent child, and say,

"God's in His heaven;
All's right with the world"?

The answer is simple. Leave Him out of His heaven and out of His world, and Christmas, with its "glorious song of old," is little less than a mockery. But hold to the faith that has stayed and steadied unnumbered multitudes of earth's finest spirits in days when those about them were saying, "Where is now thy God?" and you will greet the dawn of the new Christmas with a deep and satisfying peace. Here is an optimism that will hail the coming Christmas not because it ignores the facts, but in spite of the facts; an optimism that knows that, though mighty empires have come and gone, and darkness settled over many a nation like an impenetrable gloom, the world has steadily, if slowly, rolled out of darkness into light. This is not the only era in human history when civilization has seemed to be drifting toward the rocks, with no watcher at the bow and no hand on the helm.

Would any of us like to go back to the days when man was emerging from his arboreal life? Do we pine for the civilization of Bablylon or Eyypt, or Rome, with the world mostly slaves? Have we made no progress even through nights of French Revolutions and Russian horrors? Look back over human history and trace the upward climb, and mark the larger world into which humanity has come since the first Christmas day, and despair will give place to hope, and the song of Browning's little maid will not seem so mad a dream.—Dumb Animals.

C. S. Kauffman, the road-builder of Denton, while on his way to Scranton, Pa., Thanksgiving Day, was in collision with another car near Wilmington, Del. His Studebaker car was overturned and smashed and his wife badly injured. She was taken to a Wilmington hospital.

Get More High Priced Eggs From Your Flock

We have made practical tests of feeding hens for eggs with our

"Cornell Brand Laying Mash"

And the results have been better than we had hoped for.

CORNELL BRAND BUTTERMILK LAYING MASH is prepared according to the latest scientific methods, containing all the necessary requirements for egg production, and costs but little more than the cheapest mixture that can be made, but as an egg producer and health promoter, it is worth more than double the cost of the majority of mash feeds being fed to-day.

Other Poultry Feeds are :
SCRATCH FEED
BEEF SCRAPS
GRIT
CRUSHED SHELL

We have a large line of
POULTRY FEEDERS
DRINKING FOUNTAINS
GRIT AND SHELL BOXES
OAT SPROUTERS

To keep the poultry in the best physical condition use Dr. Hess Panacea. Its use has grown to be a regular part of the supplies for many poultrymen.
