Good-by, Old Year

By Grace Strickler Dawson, in Kansas City Star

GOOD-BY, Old Year, good-by, I bid you farewell tonight, And I watch you go with a bit of a sigh, But my heart is strangely light.

For in my hands I hold The treasures you brought to me, Gifts more precious than wroughten gold Or gems from a tropic sea.

A friendship proven true, A hard task fairly done, And a love which lives to bloom anew With the light of every sun.

And you bear away, Old Year, In your garments of trailing white, An old regret and the ghost of a fear As you vanish from me tonight.

Good-by, Old Year, good-by! Smiling I watch you go; We have been good comrades, you and I.

But you cannot stay, I know, The New Year stands at the door, Her promises fair I hear, But still I linger to say once more, Goodby, goodby, Old Year.

Your New Year's Calls

THE gracious custom of calling on New Year's day has not entirely gone out of style. It is one relic left of a time when the amenities of life were more carefully observed than now and hospitality a grace deemed worthy of intensive cultivation.

So then, lay out your calls and start 1924 in the spirit of neighborliness and the good old days "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

Put first on your list your aged friends and acquaintances, since we forget and neglect the aged with pathetic disregard of their sensitiveness and their loneliness.

The line of least resistance with many of us is to avoid contact with querulous old age wherever possible, and this is particularly true during the holiday season.

Few children are forgotten at Christmas, but many elderly persons are left to reflect bitterly on the thoughtlessness of you and the fate of the superannuated through whose veins the blood courses thin and slow.

So put on your best bib and tucker and take your cane if you wear one, and, armed with, say, half a dozen red roses, make us many calls on the "shut-ins" and the veterans who sit in the deepening twilight musing on the days that are no more.

Stay long enough to crack your best joke, and, since "one touch of rheumatism makes the whole world kin," do not forget to ask after Aunt Mary's sciatica and Uncle John's lame arm.

Make it a happy, cheery kind of call—present your gift and go your way, and our word for it, you will begin the New Year with every flag a-flying.—Detroit News.

New Year Surprises

By Mary Graham Bonner

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

AN OLD-TIME custom on the first day of the New Year was for a group of people to prepare surprise baskets filled with fruit and nuts and candies and a jar of jam or a pudding, and fixing the baskets gaily with ribbon, take them around to less fortunate ones.

Many and many were the small towns where the people followed this custom, and as the basket was presented, a happy New Year was wished to the recipient.

It would be well for many of the old customs to be preserved!

Our Postman's Perquisite

By C. G. HAZARD

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

EMPATHET commutators along the line of the D. L. & W. R. R. used to call it the "Delay, Linger and Wait route," and those who for various reasons were in a hurry to get their mail were tempted to apply the term to our postman.

Certainly they could not call him "The Fast Mail!" To the pace of a tortoise he added conversational abilities that arrested him with passing acquaintances and interests that detained him upon street corners, so that agonized lovers, who had not had letters since yesterday, would see him wave in sight down the street long before he delivered the precious messages, fretting themselves in the meanwhile.

But he was so interested in our postals, so sympathetic in our disappointments, so willing to take packages and letters down to the office and to buy us stamps, and such a bond between us and our friends afar, that we forgave him even when he was a missing link and brought us nothing and always upon New Year's day we were glad to make both him and our selves happy with not unexpected, but fairly earned bills on our Uncle Sam.

A Carpenter

The young Carpenter of Nazareth was a worker who loved joyousness and beauty, even as He is heart overflowed with sympathy for the weary toilers who passed before his workshop door.

He may have been a man of many sorrows, but it is equally true that He was also a man of many joys. They welcomed Him at wedding feasts; children went to Him instinctively; the common people heard His magic words that lightened their burdens, and the wise men listened to Him attentively because He had a secret beside which their knowledge was as dust before wind.

Immense The centuries have rolled by and His work survives—to love one another. And it was He who taught us that the greatest is he who serves most.

Obedient these commands, let us all open our hearts to the beauty in the world and the loveliness and essential goodness of the men and women.

May we all learn that those who give most and that those who offer themselves completely in service to their fellows find their hearts flooded with peace which passeth understanding.

On His birthday let each one of us dedicate our lives to carrying forward His message of peace on earth good will to all men.
