

THE NEW BABY

Opens up a new world to the loving mother. If it is a strong, healthy baby that new world is a world of happiness. If it is a weak, fretful child the new world is full of anxiety. It has been proven in thousands of cases, that the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes all the difference between strength and weakness in children. Healthy, happy mothers have healthy, happy children. "Favorite Prescription" gives the mother strength to give her child. It makes the baby's advent practically painless and promotes the secretion of the nourishment necessary to the healthful feeding of the nursing child.

"I have been using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and can say it is just what you advertise it to be," writes Mrs. Victor J. Hadin, of Leonardsville, Riley Co., Kansas. "I began taking it just two months before baby came and was greatly benefited by its use. The doctor who attended me said I did about as well as any one he had seen (as I was sick only about three hours), and also that your 'Favorite Prescription' was 'one patent medicine' which he did have faith in. We now have a darling baby boy, strong and healthy, who weighed nine pounds when born. During this month he has gained three and one-half pounds. Have never given him one dose of medicine."

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY EXPIRES SATURDAY.

"Good-Bye All, Good By—It Is God's Way—His Will Be Done". His Last Words

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 14th.—William McKinley, twenty-fifth President of the United States, died at 2.15 o'clock this morning, on the eighth day after being shot down by the anarchist, Czolgosz, in the Temple of Music, at the Pan-American Exposition. Mrs. McKinley was with him in his last conscious moments, when he comforted her and bade her a tender farewell.

THE PRESIDENT'S FAVORITE HYMN.

Lead kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
Lead thou me on;
The night is dark, and I am far from home.
Lead thou me on;
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene,—one step enough for me.
I was not ever thus, nor prayed reat Thou
Shouldst lead me on
I loved to choose and see my path; but now
Lead thou me on;
I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will, remember not past years,
So long Thy power hath blest me, sure it still
Will lead me on
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone;
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since, ane lost awhile

HIS LIFE IN BRIEF.

William McKinley was born January 29, 1843, at Niles, Ohio. He was the seventh child of his parents, William McKinley and Nancy Campbell Allison McKinley.

Upon being graduated by the Union Seminary of Poland, Ohio., he became a school teacher. Upon the outbreak of the civil war, he enlisted as a private and was promoted to major.

After the war he was admitted to the bar in Warren, Ohio. In 1876 he became a candidate for Congress. His congressional career was marked by great ability. In 1890 he introduced in Congress the tariff measure which bears his name. In 1891 he was elected Governor of Ohio and re-elected in 1893. In November, 1896, he was elected President of the United States, and was triumphantly re-elected over his former antagonist in 1900.

HIS LAST HOURS.

BUFFALO, Sept. 14th.—The last day of the President was an alternate time of hope and fear for the anxious watchers about his bedside. A slight improvement was noticed in the morning, and the physicians announced that the President had a fighting chance, but about 3 o'clock in the afternoon the doctors saw that the end was only a matter of time and about 6 o'clock they announced that the President was dying.

Mr. McKinley became unconscious about 6.40 o'clock in the evening. Later on he revived under the influence of stimulants and asked for Mrs. McKinley. She at once went to the bedside of her dying husband, who bade her a tender farewell. He then again became unconscious and remained in that condition until he died.

At 9.20 it was announced that the President was slowly dying. He was kept alive only by the use of oxygen. He was unconscious and remained so until 2.15 o'clock, when he died.

Before he lost consciousness he bade his wife farewell. He was then heard to murmur the words of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

His last words were: "Good-bye all, good-bye. It is God's way. His will be done."

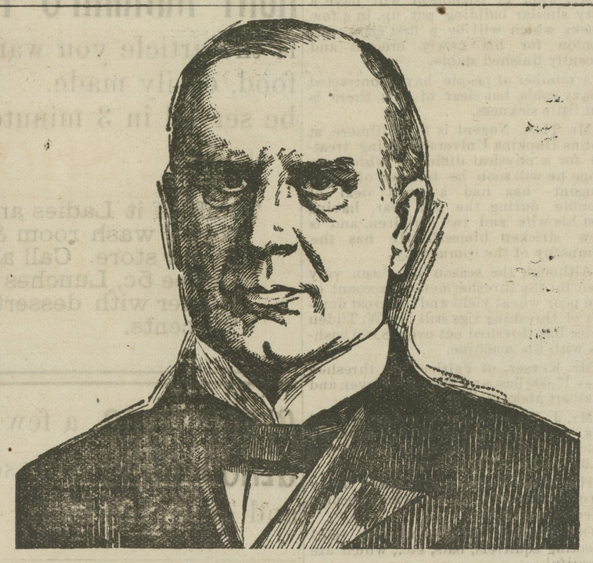

THE AWLFUL CRIME.

"God's will, not ours, be done!" These were the last words of the President. William McKinley, twenty-fifth President of the United States, statesman, soldier loyal citizen, devoted husband, dutiful son, sincere friend—in brief, one of Nature's noblemen.

And he is dead from an assassin's bullet. One perverted creature has plunged the whole nation into mourning. Only a little over a week ago the President, hale, hearty, strong, a type of American manhood, stood amidst the plaudits of his own people. With his patriotic, stirring words of the day before ringing in their ears, thousands press forward eagerly to receive a hearty clasp of his hand, a genial smile and a few kindly words. Then, without a moment's warning, an alien born, a Judas, while extending to him one hand of friendship, with the other shot him down.

For a few minutes the vast assemblage in the Temple of Music was almost paralyzed with horror at the enormity of thing. Then a colored man, James Parker, flung himself upon the murderer and wildest excitement prevailed in the great crowd. Had it not been for the strong arm of the law, the assailant of the President would have met a summary death. He was hurried to prison, and the news was given to the world. From that time on, September 6, the briefest message relating to the President's condition was awaited with eager interest. Horror and incredulity were followed by deep sorrow. Then tidings of hope began to arrive. Hope grew into confidence, but unhappily came the ending of hope. The end was sadder than if the hope never had existed. The brave fight the President made against death; his patience in suffering; his constant thoughtfulness of others, the lack of revengeful resentment toward his assailant—these traits brought to all the thought of what the loss of such a man would be. Everybody feels it to be a personal loss.

"He taught us how to live, but oh; too high,
The price of knowledge; he taught us how to die."

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

OUR ILLUSTRIOUS DEAD!

HEROISM OF MRS. MCKINLEY.

Heartfelt sympathy is expressed everywhere for Mrs. McKinley. She has borne up bravely under her affliction, but it is feared that her strength will leave her now. A physician is with her at all times.

Dr. Rixey told Mrs. McKinley of the great change for the worse in her husband's condition early in the morning. She took the shock with superb fortitude, and throughout the awful day of suspense remained perfectly composed. "She said she would bear up for his sake."

She went to him for the last time when he asked for her about 8.40 in the evening. A faint smile lit upon the face of the President as she sat down beside him and clasped his hand.

She broke into deep sobs, and as if the truth burst upon her at that moment, she turned to Dr. Rixey and said, "I know that you will save him, I cannot let him go; the country cannot spare him." She was allowed to remain only a few minutes, then tender friends led her away. She was urged to go to bed and obtain some rest. She was sleeping when the President died. Those relatives present at the time of his death were the only brother of the President, Abner McKinley, and his wife, Miss Helen McKinley, Mrs. Sarah Duncan, Miss Mary Barber, Miss Sarah Duncan, Lieutenant James F. McKinley, William M. Duncan, John Barber and F. M. Osborne, a cousin.

In Memory of my father, JAMES LEWIS, who departed this life Aug. 19, 1901.

In Chester Cemetery the stars are shining
Upon our Father's grave.
Where sleepeth, without dreaming,
He whom we could not save.
He sleeps within the cold, cold grave,
The dark blue skies above him:
He was so good and kind on earth,
None knew him but to love him.
Friends may think we'll soon forget him
And our wounded hearts be healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That's within our heart concealed.

SON, J. B. L.

Steamer Upset.—The Carrie, a small steamboat used in conveying and towing tomatoes to the canning factory of Roberts Brothers, Snow Hill, turned over at the wharf of the canning factory Monday afternoon. She had just thrown a line to the wharf when the whole cargo of four tons or more of tomatoes began to slide, and, quick as a flash, the boat overturned in 20 feet of water, with nothing but her bottom and propeller showing. Howard Godfrey, and John Hunter, engineer, were in the engine-room at the time and narrowly escaped with their lives by climbing out of the cabin window. The Carrie is a new boat, having been licensed but a few weeks ago. She is 40 feet long, with an 8 feet beam, and draws 28 inches of water. The boat is owned by Mr. John Hunter, of Red Landing.
